MR. DAUGHERTY, ATTORNEY-GENERAL, after listening to arguments by Levy Mayer and other lawyers, says the proposed merger of steel companies is legal, doesn't violate any law. In any case, the mergers are welcome. The bigger the concern the better, if it will divide economics with the people. If not, the people ought to watch it and make it divide. To watch two big concerns is easier than watching a dozen small ones.

These particular mergers are not important anyhow, inasmuch as all steel companies exist by the grace and permission of Judge Gary's big United States Steel Corporation. As you invest in new steel stocks, "bear in mind and remember," as the showman says, that United States Steel can sell for a profit for less than the manufacturing cost of any other company. The others have lived because Judge Gary is too wise to use power recklessly.

Isadora Duncan arrived in Paris to get money for her dancing school in Moscow. She has a new dance. Only the eyes and eyebrows dance, the hands are feebly waved, the body is still. It would seem a first class dance, especially for a lady not as thin as she once was. It is a highly appropriate dance coming out of Russia, for that large nation is with Isadora Duncan in that style of dancing. Russia's giant industrial body is still, the Bolshevist eyes and eyebrows alone dance, feebly.

Minnie Mandelbaum, only fifteen, has a baby six months old. Its father's name is Simon Siegel, also fifteen. For mysterious reasons, somebody sent the girl and the baby to an institution. Justice Finch sends them back to Minnie's father and mother, who are willing to take them after the first fluster.

Justice Finch, if correctly reported, said: "Cromwell and Michael Angelo were born out of wedlock, and who knows but what the baby held in the arms of his youthful mother, here in court, may not attain as much fame as they?"

It's news to most of us about Michael Angelo and Cromwell; but William the Conqueror and Leonardo Da Vinci were born out of wedlock, and they will do as samples.

The extreme youth of the father and mother cut down the chances of this particular baby. Napoleon's mother began having babies at fourteen, but was a grown woman when Napoleon was born.

Perfect babies, which will come thousands of centuries from now when the earth is fully populated, will have mothers about thirty-five years old and fathers fifty and upward. They will get fully de-

Hooper Leaves White House With Instructions to See Union Leaders

IF HE FAILS, ACTION IN COURT FOLLOWS

Charge Will Be "Conspiracy to Interfere With Interstate Commerce"

By BRUCE MACNAMEE,
Universal Service Correspondent.

Washington, July 22.—Out of a series of White House conferences today, it was said, semi-officially, President Harding's plan to end the railway strike controversy will crystallize.

Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the Railway Labor Board, was instructed by the chief executive to return to Chicago and make a last determined effort to get the strikers to return to work.

Failing in this, the administration is prepared through court proceedings to terminate the strike by charging a conspiracy to interefere with interstate commerce.

These were the outstanding developments in a day of conferences which began with the arrival of Chairman Hooper from Chicago, whence he was hurriedly summoned yesterday by President Harding.

THREE HOURS WITH HARDING.

Going directly to the White House, Mr. Hooper was closeted for more than three hours with the President. While the Railway Board chairman was relating every phase of the controversy to the President, Senators Watson of Indiana, Kellogg and Cummins of the Interstate Commerce committee were admitted to the conference, which later was augmented by Secretary of War Weeks.

The only statement issued at the conclusion of the meeting was that made by Mr. Hooper. He said:

"I have gone over the whole situation very thoroughly with the President, undertaking to give him the history of the controversy in its every phase down to the present time. I do not feel at liberty to discuss the details of the things talked about with the President."

RETURNS TO CHICAGO.

Chairman Hooper added that he was returning by the first train to Chicago, where it was definitely learned he has received instructions immediately to renew his conference

Ryan Owes Seven Dollars For His Hat

New York, July 22.

ALLAN A. RYAN, who went to the wall with liabilities of $32,435,477 and assets of $643,553, owes seven dollars for his hat.

Two years ago Ryan thought he was worth $35,000,000. Today he has $16 cash.

In addition to owing Charles Schwab $309,555, Coleman Dupont $66,000 and Samuel Untermyer $45,000, his list of unsecured creditors shows he owes for jewelry, toilet articles, dry goods, club dues, tuition for his children, coal and wood, meat and vegetables, bread, medical services, books, candy, shoes, ice, furs, furniture, dentistry, theatre tickets, telephone, flowers, hair dressing, toys and radiograms.

NEW MOVE TO END COAL WAR

Harding Turns to Bituminous Field; Fleet to Carry Welsh Fuel Here

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE,
Universal Service Correspondent.

Washington, July 22.—After learning of a definite move toward peace in the anthracite fields, President Harding today turned his whole attention to the more troublesome bituminous situation.

With operators and miners apparently hopelessly deadlocked, he launched plans to avert a fuel famine in spite of the strike.

Reports on reopening of mines at the invitation of the President were not encouraging. An insignificant number of operators in the bituminous field has made an effort to resume production. It was pointed out the operators had informed the President that his invitation would have to be submitted to State and district coal associations for independent action.

The first meetings to take up this matter were held today and will continue Monday.

In Illinois and Indiana the State law prohibits any but licensed miners entering shaft mines. It will be impossible to get licensed miners outside of the ranks of the unions.

Coal in reserve or mined from now on will be carefully conserved.

Mr. Hoover will appoint a commission, of which he will be the chairman, to administer the rationing.

As an emergency measure to relieve the coal shortage at Eastern ports, the Shipping Board announced that forty ships now in English waters are loading Welsh coal for the United States.

The board informed the President that in addition to this there are 300 American ships tied up that may immediately be put in the coal carrying trade. The total tonnage will be 1,600,000 tons monthly, if the plan is employed

Millionaire Pursues Dancer to Los Angeles; Talk of "Settlement"

Los Angeles, July 22.—Evan Burrows Fontaine, dancer, who has sued Cornelius Vanderbilt ("Sonny") Whitney for breach of promise, charging he is the father of her nineteen-months-old son, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Jr., was found here today by representatives of the Boston Advertiser.

She had much to say of her wrecked romance, in which she says the son of Harry Payne Whitney is the central figure.

In her suite at the Alexandria Hotel, transformed into a bower of roses, Miss Fontaine, between interruptions of many telephone messages, some from New York, for the first time gave a detailed statement. She said, without bitterness, save where the baby is concerned:

"I met Sonny at a ball something over two years ago. He was in his second year at Yale. We planned to get married when he had completed his course.

URGED TO MARRY.

"Several times he urged me to marry him. But I did not want to interfere with his education. His mother and his friends of high social standing would then be throwing it up to him all his life, that if he had not married me, he would have finished at Yale.

"Why is it a woman always sticks and a man never does? That's the way with women. Either they don't know any better, or they know too much.

"I always felt more like a mother to Sonny than his promised wife. He is twenty-four and I am a year younger, but I had that feeling just the same.

"As soon as I knew I was to become a mother, I went up to New Haven and told him of it. From that moment he began to change, al-

26 HURT IN CAR COLLISION

Twenty-six persons, many of them women, were injured yesterday afternoon in a head-on collision of two surface cars of the Boston Elevated Railway at Washington and Northampton streets, South End.

Six of the injured were removed to the City Hospital. They were:

Frederick Hitchenberg, twenty-six years old, No. 75 Augustus avenue, Roslindale, bruises and injury of the back.

Elizabeth Hitchenberg, six, cut above the right eye and lacerations. Same address.

Robert Hitchenberg, five, badly shaken up and bruises. Also of the same address.

Jennie Gluckman, fifty-five, No. 47 Walworthy street, Dorchester, lacerations about the forehead and head.

Laura Welnberg, fourteen, No. 134 Ellington street, Dorchester, injuries of left wrist, lacerations of the shoulder and abrasions.

Rebecca Weinberg, thirty-five, No. 267 Blue Hill avenue, injuries of the left side and abrasions.

Both of the cars were on the Blue Hill avenue line. For some distance near the junction of Washington and Northampton streets one of the trucks is undergoing repairs, making it necessary to route the cars over the remaining track.

The inward-bound car was just turning into Washington street when it hit the outward-bound car.

There was a crash of shattered glass, audible for blocks, and a grinding of brakes as the two motormen brought the cars to a halt. Several women screamed and others became hysterical. Conductors, however, remained at their posts and opened the doors so that those who were able could leave or assist the injured to get to the street.

BODIES OF THREE EXHUMED

Murder Charge Sustained Against Dr. Dilling Says Atty. Gen.

WOMAN, DYING, GAVE FIRST CLEW

Prisoner, in Collapse, Will Be Arraigned Tomorrow

Easton, Me., July 22.—"We have a first degree murder case against Dr. John T. Dilling, charged with performing fatal illegal surgery on at least five young women.

"It was the dying statement of Mrs. Melvina Oak, twenty years old, of Caribou, mother of three children, three weeks ago, that led us to exhume three bodies today. Mrs. Oak's body was one of them. She had named Dr. Dilling as responsible for her condition.

"We have also exhumed the body of Miss Ramona Angela Conant, nineteen years old, of Easton, who has been dead six months.

"The third body exhumed is that of a young Presque Isle girl, whose name I shall withhold for the present. We expect to exhume two more bodies tomorrow."

This is the statement made late tonight by Attorney-General Shaw of Maine.

ARRAIGNMENT MONDAY.

County Attorney W. R. Roix announced late tonight that the murder charge against Dr. Dilling would stand, and that he would be arraigned in court in Caribou Monday morning.

It was at Presque Isle today that the three bodies were exhumed and autopsies performed by Dr. S. W. Boone of Presque Isle and Dr. George B. Magrath of Boston.

Dr. Dilling was in a state of collapse when lodged in the county jail at Houlton tonight. He talked incoherently, seemed dazed and refused a statement until tomorrow, saying he desired first to consult counsel.

DILLING IS WEALTHY.

Dr. Dilling is 45 years old and has been a practicing physician here for 25 years and is reported to be wealthy.

It is charged that Dr. Dilling maintained a private hospital in Easton which offered a refuge to terror stricken girls from all over New England who were about to become mothers, and that he performed illegal surgery upon all such patients.

Some of the girls are said to have come from exclusive New England families and startling revelations are expected to result.

Dr. Dilling was arrested on Wednesday night last at the home of his sister, Mrs. Catherine McDonald, who lives at No. 829½ Broadway, Everett, Mass. Previously he is said to have fled from Easton when he learned that officers were after him and gone to St. John, New Brunswick.

When Maine officers appeared in St. John with extradition papers he again fled, but was traced to Everett.

Says Brother Is Innocent of Charges

Mrs. Catherine McDonald of No. 829½ Broadway, Everett, sister of Dr. John T. Dilling, the physician under arrest in Caribou, Me., is under severe strain and shock caused by the accusation against her brother. She told a representative of the Sunday Advertiser that her brother John arrived in Everett about ten days ago, for the first time in five years, and was to take her back to Maine to spend the summer.

Mrs. McDonald says that Dr. Dilling quieted her fears at the time he was arrested last Thursday, telling her that he was innocent and wanted to go back to Maine to prove it.

"My brother was born at Houlton, Me.," said she, "and devoted most of his time since receiving his degree to the practice of medicine at Easton. He was sixty-five years old and was preparing to retire from active practice because of heart trouble and failing health. It was a great shock to both of us."

Easton Case Recalls Mildred Sullivan Crime

The Easton sensation recalls the case of Mildred Leah Sullivan, a seventeen-year-old school girl of Houlton, for whose death, due to illegal surgery, Dr. Lionel E. Dudley, physician and surgeon of Presque Isle, is serving a term of from fifteen to twenty years in the State prison at Augusta.

The Mildred Sullivan case attracted national attention in 1914. Evidence at Dudley's trial showed that the girl was buried at midnight, before the spark of life had scarcely left her, and that he had operated while he was intoxicated. Dudley and Alice Pelletier of Presque Isle and Katie Michaud, a nurse, accompanied Dr. Dudley in his automobile in the rear of which was Mildred's body wrapped in a blanket.

The two young women were alleged to have helped Dudley dig a shallow grave in a strip of woods, and as they toiled by the light of a lantern, the songs and laughter of barges of merrymakers returning from the county fair, came to their ears.

Dr. Dudley was arrested on suspicion in Boston. He had influential friends who did everything in their power to protect him. In spite of his protests of innocence and the claims of error on the part of his friends, Dudley stood up in court after his trial had progressed some days in Houlton and pleaded guilty.

With him was sentenced Alice Pelletier, with whom he was reported to have a clandestine affair. She was pardoned later on the plea that she was suffering from tuberculosis. Katie Michaud turned State's evidence and was shown clemency.

HARDING TRIES AGAIN TO END RAIL STRIKE

with heads of the striking shopmen to settle the remaining two points of controversy. These are restoration of seniority rights and appointment of a national adjustment board for the settlement of conditions of labor. The strikers insist they will not return to work until they are granted these two points. Railroads insist with equal force they will not be granted.

After his lengthy session with Hooper, President Harding saw Senators Underwood and Simmons, minority members of the interstate commerce commitee, and for more than an hour discussed the possibility of changes in the transportation act to deal with the present situation. It was agreed, however, that the law as it stands was adequate in this emergency, although the probability of future changes was admitted.

The present crisis, it was declared, showed clearly the necessity of at least two changes. The first and most important is to put "teeth" in the decisions of the Railway Labor Board providing penalties for disregard of its decision.

The second contemplated amendment would bring about removal of the board from Chicago to Washington, where it could work in actual touch with the Interstate Commerce Commission in fixing rates and wages.

It is the belief of many that the present controversy might have been avoided if the board and commission had conferred together before announcing new freight rates and reduced wages.

EUROPE DRIFTS TOWARDS DISASTER, LACKING AID OF U. S., SAYS LORD GREY

"The Situation Is Growing Increasingly Serious; We Are Making No Progress Towards the Reconstruction of Europe," Declares Former British Foreign Minister.

By VISCOUNT GREY.
(Former British Foreign Minister.)

London, July 22.—The situation in the world is growing increasingly serious. Years have passed since the armistice, but we are making no progress towards the reconstruction of Europe.

I do not think Genoa made any substantial progress. The first thing that was essential was the co-operation of the government and the resources of the United States. When the United States did not go to Genoa the heart was taken out of the conference.

The British government should have sounded the United States as to the methods under which they would take a part in the reconstruction of Europe, and if that was not done it was a grave and fatal mistake.

The prime condition of getting that co-operation was for France and ourselves to be in cordial agreement.

It could not be said now that the United States would not co-operate, for their reply, giving their refusal to go to The Hague, was a reasoned statement, not only as to why they would not go, but of the condition on which they would co-operate with the objects of the Genoa conference.

The proper way was not to arrange a conference and then to regret that the United States did not come in, but, in concert with France, to determine the methods to be adopted to secure the co-operation of the United States.

MUST SETTLE REPARATION.

The second point, the question of German reparations, is a very difficult and delicate one to deal with. It was excluded from Genoa because the French government demanded that it should be. They were perfectly right to demand that, and the British Prime Minister was perfectly right to concede the demand. Genoa was not a suitable place for the question of reparations to be discussed.

So long as that question remains unsettled it do not believe progress is possible. Conferences like that at Genoa, which were devoted to the very laudable end of securing peace and economic and financial reconstruction in Europe, are really not going to make any progress so long as the question of reparations remains hanging like a cloud over the political and economical situation in Europe.

During the period immediately after the armistice a great wave of opinion swept over the world, that Germany must be made to pay the whole cost of the war. Reparations were much less important to us than to France, but England forced the pace in the beginning, and so it does not come well from us now to talk of altering the treaty of Versailles or scaling reparations down.

DISAPPOINTED FRANCE.

A great deal was said and written which does not take into account the feeling and position of France. Of all the Allies who signed the Peace Treaty, France must feel more disappointed and anxious at the course events have taken since the peace than any other country.

After the peace was signed her first anxiety was security. She thought it would be obtained, not only by the treaty, but by something much more important—the Franco-American and the Franco-British treaty, which gave her to understand that if Germany should again attack France, the whole naval and military and air forces of the British empire and the United States would be behind her. That was an enormous security; but it has gone. Those treaties are no longer in existence.

Then, by reparations, she was to restore her finances. The languages used on behalf of the British government must have encouraged her. But I believe that she has not obtained anything appreciable toward the cost of repairing her devastated regions. That she is doing out of her own pocket.

What is the amount Germany has paid in reparations altogether? I put the French case because I believe that it is impossible to approach the reparations question without a full knowledge of the French position.

MUST FACE FACTS.

Reparations would have to be settled, not by sentiment, but by facing the facts. Cash in large quantities, I think, cannot be obtained without an international loan, and that cannot be secured without the co-operation of the United States.

Genoa ought to be devoted to securing agreement with the Bolshevist government. So far as one could judge from the newspapers, the securing of an agreement with the Bolsheviks was the great object pursued at the conference. That was a mistake.

I do not believe that such an agreement is of the first practical importance in the reconstruction of Europe. It is very desirable, theoretically, but practically I don't believe it would be so.

I have nothing to say against the humanitarian measures for the relief of the people of Russia, but I am dealing only with the financial and economic reconstruction of Europe.

The recovery of Russia must be infinitesimally slow after the destruction of the war.

The United States government prepared to co-operate in the matter, but only by an expert committee, which shall first of all inquire into the facts. In that I believe they are perfectly right. It was a great mistake made at Genoa, the pursuit of an agreement with Russia before such inquiries. The conditions laid down by the United States are perfectly sound.

veloped strength from the mother and a fully developed mind from the father. That was the idea of Plato, and it is sound. What we need just now is population, including plenty of healthy proletarians.

While this is written on a railroad train traveling from one newspaper office to another, cars loaded with hogs pass on their way to the slaughter house. One small hog is rubbing his neck against the rough edge of the car door, squealing and biting at another trying to get his place.

If he knew what is coming to that neck very soon, he would not bother about scratching it.

Perhaps if we knew what is coming to us before long, we should stop biting at each other and trying to take each others' places.

What would the founder of Christianity have said about this? Nahant, near Boston, where Senator Lodge lives in solemn grandeur and political apprehension, is a most exclusive Summer resort.

He is not exactly exclusive, and on his lawn is a big sign, "any workingman, regardless of color, creed or nationality, can have the use of a room in this house for one week free of charge."

Small children, ragged, gather on "Mike's" now exclusive lawn and eat slices of watermelon and treat from the butcher shop.

Nahant asks the court to put "Mike" out: the court won't. Nobody calls on "Mike," he doesn't seem to care, and there it rests.

TWO WIVES ARE HUNTING FOR SOLDIER

"Kindest-Hearted Man," They Say, but Want to Lay Hands on Him

The "most sympathetic and the kindest hearted man in the whole wide world" is missing and his two wives, both prominent in Boston and New York society, want to know where he is.

Stanley A. Thomas, former captain in the World War army of Uncle Sam, is the gentleman who figures in this tangle. The wives now insist on using their former names. They are:

WIFE NO. 1—Miss Carol Eager of Brookline, twenty-three years old, very good looking and the daughter of a prosperous business man.

WIFE NO. 2—Mrs. Florence A. Brodt, former wife of an Essex County physician, many years older than Thomas and reputed to be wealthy.

Mrs. Brodt has instituted divorce proceedings in New York and Miss Eager will enter the Boston divorce court in November.

SYMPATHETIC ALWAYS.

Thomas, admitted by his wives to be a mystery man, deserted both, but not until he had obtained a tidy sum of money. From the charming Miss Eager, it is charged, he successfully succeeded in getting nearly $10,000 and from the matronly Mrs. Brodt more than $15,000.

"Where is he?" asks Miss Eager. "I don't know and I don't care. He is a mystery man. Nobody seems to know anything concerning his life. I think he is a native of Reading, Pa., but I am not sure."

Miss Eager smiled prettily when commenting on Thomas and admitted that the bigamist possessed certain virtues.

"He has a penchant for marrying," said the Brookline girl, "and just why I can't understand, because he is a very kind man. In the eight months he lived with me he never uttered an unkind word and displayed a sympathy that was most remarkable."

The Thomas-Eager-Brodt affair, admitted by the lawyers to be a twisted fabric of love, romance and marriage is most colorful in its setting.

Thomas proved to be a romantic figure. On the surface he was a gentleman. He liked the so-called better things in life, such as fine apartments, wonderful furniture, choice food, expensive autos and dapper suits.

His wishes were gratified to the last degree and with the money supplied by his fair wives.

He made his appearance in Boston during the Winter of 1918.

WILL YOU BE MINE?

It was during the hectic days of the war when Boston girls opened their hearts and nurses to the boys in uniform. Thomas wore the uniform of an infantry captain and was welcomed in Miss Eager's social circle.

A month later he confessed that he was in love with the girl and that life would be a perfect blank to him unless he could lead her to an altar. The following January they were married.

Thomas received his discharge and back-pay that amounted to more than a thousand dollars, and with this money the couple started on an extensive honeymoon.

"Now that I am out of the service," said Thomas to his young wife, "I can go back in the secret service. That is a great service and one that pays a big salary."

The future looked bright to the young bride and, eager to give her soldier husband a long rest, she consented to string out the honeymoon. She sold nearly $3,000 worth of securities and gave the money to Thomas.

The honeymoon over, they returned to the Hub and Thomas placed his bride in an expensive Brookline apartment. He bought the most expensive furniture in the market and ordered the choicest steaks, but when the bills began to appear in the mail box the soldier groom was missing.

AND HE MARRIED AGAIN.

That was only eight months after the wedding and not until last August did Miss Eager hear from her husband. Then he called her home on the telephone and asked if she intended to divorce him.

"You are not worth bothering with," was the answer he received.

Last January the romantic soldier married Mrs. Florence A. Brodt of No. 497 Beacon street and, though nearly twenty years older than her husband, the friends of Mrs. Brodt smiled on the match and pronounced it a genuine love affair.

"Let us go to New York, suggested Thomas to his second wife. "Boston is a slow place and I am sure you can be happier in the big town. I want you to be happy and, in fact, that is my only object in life."

So Mrs. Brodt packed her furniture and went to New York, where she hired an apartment at No. 323 Park avenue.

Mrs. Brodt bought an expensive automobile and bits of furniture that Thomas liked. But soon after the opening of the New York apartment her suspicions were aroused. To make sure that she was not doing her husband an injustice, she hired detectives to investigate his life, and in less than two weeks they disclosed that Thomas had a wife in Boston and that he was not connected with the secret service or any service that carried a salary.

When asked to explain, Thomas packed his clothes and left his home.

Mrs. Brodt sued for divorce and Miss Eager signed a deposition stating that Thomas had never divorced her and that he was just an adventurer.

"He is a poor specimen of manhood," said Miss Eager when discussing her unfortunate marriage. "He never works and seems to feel that women ought to support him. But he is awfully kind. In fact, it is his kindly and sympathetic manner that fooled me and I am sure it fooled Mrs. Brodt."

Rush New Law Permitting U. S. to Run Trains

By Universal Service.

TO keep traffic moving, Washington, July 22. section 15 of the Interstate Commerce act will be made immediately effective.

This drastic law authorizes the government, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, to assume control and operate all railroad facilities when an emergency exists.

This move was decided upon at a conference tonight between Attorney - General Daugherty and Chairman McChord of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It is understood that the full authority authorized will be applied and exercised if train service is futher diminished or an improvement in the strike situation is not shown in the next forty-eight hours.

GIRL RESCUED AT PEMBERTON

Sixteen-year-old James D. Shay of Clark street, Cambridge, and John T. Maher of No. 103 Water street, Boston, yesterday warded off a tragedy at the outing of Jordan, Marsh employes at Pemberton.

A young woman employe, Lena Henderson, of Dorchester, while swiming with another girl, was caught by the current of Hull Gut and was rapidly being borne away when the girl's cries brought Shay and Maher to the scene. Fully clad, both plunged into the water. The Henderson girl had gone down three times when young Shay reached her.

No Leadership in Senate and Bungling in House Is Charged

By Universal Service.

Washington, July 22.—The first instalment of the Democratic National Committee's 1922 campaign speakes, manual, off the press today, bitterly arraigns the present Congress. It states:

"The sitting Republican Congress, now asking for re-election, is the worst Congress in twenty years and it does not deserve re-election. Instead of having friends and advocates, everybody is saying among other things that it is cowardly and inept that it never did a lower job than today, and that the high priests of privilege at Washington are now destroying the principles bequeathed by Lincoln."

Charging that "there is no leadership in the Senate," the manual asks: "Who is the nominal Senate leader?" and answers: "Henry Cabot Lodge." Then it introduces an editorial from the Des Moines (Iowa) Register, described as "the banner Republican paper of that Republican State." The editorial is headed "Lodge discredited and disgruntled."

On the subject of House leadership an editorial from the Manchester (N. H.) Union of May 11, entitled "Leader Mondell's Bungling," is quoted. This is another Republican paper.

An editorial of the Boston Transcript of March 2 is quoted to support the charge that this is the "worst Congress in twenty years."

The Ohio State Journal (Republican) in an editorial June 21 is credited with the charge that this is a "cowardly and inept Congress."

AUSTRALIA BARS GERMAN CONSULS

London, July 22.—The Australian Federal government has refused to agree to the appointment of German consuls in Australia.

GERMANY TO SHOW BOOKS TO ALLIES

Agrees to Make Complete Reports on All Forms of Income

TURNS OVER ALL FINANCES

Acceptance of Plan Meets Approval of French Bankers

Paris, July 22 (by the Associated Press).—The plan for the allied control of Germany's finances worked out by the committee of guarantees, official acceptance of which by the German government was announced today, provides for accrediting of the committee's representatives to practically all the departments of the German Ministry of Finance, over which they will exercise personal supervision.

The bureaus dealing with receipts and expenditures, the movement of capital abroad and questions relating to the publication of financial and economic statistics will be especially controlled.

MONTHLY STATEMENTS.

Germany agrees to furnish the committee with monthly statements showing the progress in the collection of taxes, including the income tax.

The percentages assessed on private business, daily statements of the amount of the floating debt and statements every ten days setting forth the exact situation of the government's finances, are documents which the German government has promised faithfully to make.

Monthly reports of the receipts from customs, taxes, the postoffices, the telegraph and railroads, supplemented monthly by a report on the situation of the floating debt, are further requirements which Germany has agreed to.

WILL SHOW EVERYTHING.

The German Ministry of Finance also must submit to the committee quarterly statements of the receipts and expenditures under the current budget. Finally yearly, the recapitulation of the receipts and expenditures of the national budget after the annual settlement and budget of the German government accounts must be furnished.

The majority of the opinion in French financial circles expresses satisfaction with the plan adopted.

BILLIE BURKE SENDS 'FLO' AN ULTIMATUM OVER MARILYNN

ZIEGFELD IN FRANTIC RUSH HOME

'Walt and Be Fair," Husband Cables; "Stand With Me!"

LOVE TANGLE MAY LEAD TO SEPARATION

Actress Refuses to Make Any Comment Regarding Miss Miller

By ELEANOR EARLY.

York Harbor, Me., July 22.—Billy Burke has cabled 99 reproachful words to Florenz Ziegfeld, Junior—and those 99 words may portend separation of the famous couple. Be that as it may, across the ocean she has flashed incriminations and an ultimatum, as aftermath of the Ziegfeld-Marilynn Miller row. Flo, in Paris, is frantic.

Back he's cabled his adoration, and a protestation of his innocence. Beseeching her to believe in him, he announces that he's sailing on the next boat.

Today his wife received the following cable:

"Billie, darling, I am nearly insane. For God's sake cable me what it is all about. I am not afraid of the truth, and I swear to God on anything you name there is nothing to which you can take exception. Realize my position. Naturally people try to get even with me by doing what hurts you. I have not hesitated to tell the truth about people, and have fought against what I considered to my detriment and theirs. You as my wife should stand with me, and not let my enemies accomplish their hellish purpose, whatever it may be. Wait until I am proven guilty. Trying to finish my business here. Will sail on first boat. You and Patricia are all that mean anything to me. Be fair, dearest. Answer, Flo."

Has Marilynn Miller come between the Follies King and his lovely wife? Is Billie going to sue for divorce? She may—at least she is contemplating it.

"BILLIE" IS DISTRESSED.

Tonight she is pale and tired and her eyes are red with weeping.

"No," she faltered, when the Advertiser reporter asked her if she cared to deny the rumor that she will leave her husband. "No, I won't deny it."

The famous little red-head shook her titian curls.

"I won't affirm or deny anything. I simply can't talk about it. It's all very, very personal.

"It's quitet rue that I sent my husband a cable, but the contents were for him but him. Won't you please just say that 'Mrs. Ziegfeld says she has nothing to say.'

"I can't shout forth the secrets of my soul. You must let me be non-committal.

"I'll affirm nothing. I'll deny nothing."

From a reliable source the Advertiser learned that Miss Burke sent a ninety-word cable to her husband in Paris.

"I once had a wild dream," she is said to have cabled, "that you and I and the baby could be happy together, but the dream is over."

Then poor Billie, according to the Advertiser's informant, conveyed a few reproaches, and concluded by suggesting that their ways be severed.

At Winterstein cottage, her beautiful estate on York Harbor, she has denied herself to all reporters. The maid who answers their rings tells them all "Miss Burke is in her home for only her most intimate friends." Tonight, however, sweet Billie relented.

"FOR 'FLO' ALONE."

When the reporter called she was singing lullabies to little Patricia, her red-haired, bobbed-haired baby daughter. She was dressed for dinner in black velvet, that clung to the lines of her tiny figure and swept away into a gorgeous train. Like the Billie of old, she smiled and dimpled, but apprehension has left its mark upon her, and she looked tired.

"I vowed that I'd never talk to another reporter," she remarked. "All this trouble has risen from a garbled interview. I only said that I had complete confidence in Mr. Ziegfeld. Yet from that statement there grew a great front page story of things I never said.

"I am so sorry that word of the cable has leaked out. It was intended for Flo alone—yet now the public must learn of it. As for my husband—I can only say that I do not believe the accusations against him. Since our marriage eight years ago we have been very happy, and Flo has been thoughtful and loving.

"But, whatever has happened, or is about to happen, I will live my life as I've always lived it. Within a very short while I'm going to New Brunswick, where we'll shoot some scenes for my new picture. Then, when that's done, I'll hurry to New York to rehearse for a play that Booth Tarkington is writing for me. It will open there in September. As usual, I'll play the young thing who's always gay and happy. I don't know the plot yet or anything about it, but, of course, I'll love it, since Mr. Tarkington is doing it."

NEVER SAID IT."

Miss Burke threw up her hands when the reporter mentioned Marilyn Miller, the girl who accuses Ziegfeld of making love to chorus girls and principals, of breaking Anna Held's heart and of attempting to send her (Marilyn) a diamond "big as her hand," and a string of pearls that would "knock her eye out."

"Please don't ask me to talk of Miss Miller," implored Billie. "In the first place, I never said the things about her I was credited with saying, and I refuse now to exchange insults with the girl. Of course it's hard to keep quiet in the face of her innuendoes, and hard not to strike back, but that sort of publicity is a loathsome thing, and I cannot stoop to it.

"I deny that I have ever made an accusation against Miss Miller, and I will make none now. I have stopped reading the paper through which she blazes her attack on Mr. Ziegfeld and me. It only breaks my heart, and what good is anything I may say? It would only supply new fuel for the fire she has kindled. So I'm going to work, and I'm going to try hard to forget.

"You will understand, I know, that I cannot discuss Mr. Ziegfeld, other than to defend him against the charges that have been brought against him. Anything between us is of so intimate a nature that I need scarcely say I cannot discuss it for newspaper publication."

GIVES UP HER NAME.

Billie was gracious and smiling, but dignified withal.

"And one thing more," she said. "You won't print paragraphs about what I think of Patricia, will you? I think that actress-mothers should never drag their children into the limelight after them. Although I've been quoted as raving for hours about my dear little girl, I've never, never mentioned her to a reporter. So please don't say a single thing about her—we'll leave her out of this sorry muddle."

Billie is entertaining at Winterstein cottage over the week-end, and her guests have brought their children along. While she talked, a little rolly-boy named Phil toddled round the lovely drawing room—and it is such a lovely room, all rose and green, with great bunches of sweet peas and pink water lilies to carry out the color scheme.

It seems strange to hear people call the dainty comedienne "Mrs. Ziegfeld," but that is what her servants and the tradespeople of York Harbor call her. The reporter had occasion to telephone after the interview.

"Is Miss Burke there?" she asked.

"This is Mrs. Ziegfeld speaking," said Billie.

Now most actresses, as everyone knows, insist upon retaining the names that brought them fame. Not so with Billie Burke.

"It's because she's always been so crazy about Flo," explained a friend of hers. "She'd like rather be known as Mrs. Ziegfeld than Miss Burke. It's a shame if anything has come between those turtle doves. For eight years they've been happy as the day is long.

MARILYN DID IT.

"If there's trouble, Marilyn Miller's the girl who's made it. I've hoped that Flo intends to break his contract with her, and let her take the case to court, if she wants to. By the terms of her contract she stays with 'Sally' as long as 'Sally' plays; but, of course, Flo could refuse to let her go on, and then a judge would have to iron out their difficulties.

"Miss Miller has said the most dovelish things about poor Billie. She's said that her father was a circus clown, and she was born in the sawdust. Nice, ladylike thing for one girl to say about another. She has also remarked that Billie is too old to quarrel with, and that her age demands respect. Such a catty thing to say! Billie's still young and charming. If Marilyn is as youthful and lovely when she's a few years older, she will be a lucky girl.

"Now Miss Miller has had her innings. If Flo fires her—and we think he will—she'll have no more."

CAN HE MANAGE BOTH THESE STARS?

Marilynn Miller, who defied Billie Burke to "tell all she knew" about her manager husband's ways when he mixed in her romance with Jack Pickford.

Billie Burke, whose love dream of eight perfect years at Mrs. Ziegfeld has been shattered by the "cattiness" of the "Sally" star, Mrs. Grundy insists. . .

Marilynn Miller Will Promise to Obey Jack

Chicago, July 22.

MARILYNN MILLER, theatrical star, will promise to obey, "and everything," when she marries Jack Pickford, brother of Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, at the latter's Hollywood home August 1, she announced here today.

Referring to her disagreement with Florenz Ziegfeld, her manager, over the forthcooming marriage to Pickford, whose first wife, Olive Thomas, died of poisoning in Paris, Miss Miller said today, when she stopped off in Chicago en route to the coast:

"I am going to say 'obey' and everything when I marry Jack, so the whole world will know who my hoheat to goodness manager really is. The happiest day of my life, next to my wedding day, August 1, will be one that releases me from Flo Ziegfeld's management."

A member of her party stated that the wedding would take place in the home of Douglas Fairbanks and that Miss Miller, after her marriage, would continue her stage carer.

GIRL SLAYER IS DISBELIEVED

Montgomery, Ala., July 22.—Relatives and friends of Alexander Portis McKeithen, slain in a lonely wood seven miles from Montgomery Thursday, are not satisfied with the statement of Mildred Brewer, member of a well known family, that she shot McKeithen, authorities said today.

Relatives of McKeithen contend the bullet which caused death ranged downward and was fired by a person taller than the fifteen-year-old girl, who surrendered after the killing.

MARILYNN DEFIES FLO AND BILLIE

Says Miss Burke Uses Baby Like U. S. Flag in "Posing"

By LEOLA ALLARD.

Chicago, July 22.—Marilynn Miller was speeding into Chicago today on the Twentieth Century when she talked, over her coffee, about the wagging tongues trying to damage the reputation of her Jack Pickford. She loves him, and she will marry him despite anything but sudden death, she declared.

Then Marilynn said a few things about Billie Burke and Flo Ziegfeld.

"Ugh! That man" (meaning Ziegfeld). "Billie is rather sweet, and I never could see how she stood him." And Marilynn choked a raspberry.

"I will say, though, I never liked the way she uses her baby to get applause. Getting photographed with it and pretending to be the ideal mother and wife. Why, it's just the way a lot of actors use the American flag. It's really terrible."

SOCIAL AMBITIONS.

Some more toast and then: "Billie is getting socially ambitious. Can you imagine thinking there is anything in that society thing? I don't see, anyway, how anybody could get far with social wings weighted with a Ziegfeld.

"I'm not annoyed about going back in 'Sally.' I wouldn't ever see Ziegfeld if he didn't come back stage, and now he won't do that any more. When I wired Jack to ask what he thought of Flo's tactics, he answered: 'Who is this Ziegfeld? I never met him.'

"The truth is, he never did.

"My work isn't pleasant, you know, and if you think it isn't hard work to sing "Look for the Silver Lining," and work for Flo Ziegfeld, you should try it. I've got to get ten hours' sleep in order to do my work.

"Sally is a difficult role and I'm working all evening. They even have a dressing room upstairs and one down, so I can hurry faster with my changes. How could I go to champagne parties as Billie Burke, that circus clown's daughter, says?"

HER NAME REYNOLDS.

When reminded that Thomas A. Edison said five hours sleep was enough, Marilyn answered: "Well, he doesn't sing and dance.

"My life, since I was five, has practically belonged to the public," and Marilynn looked serious.

"Why can't I be allowed to choose my own husband? Jack is the only beau I ever had that mother approved of. He and mother have the best times. They are, like a couple of children together.

"My name isn't Miller, you know, its Reynolds, but Miller is better for business. My sister Claire is known as Claire Miller."

Claire, who has had some stage experience, was with Marilynn and buried her nose in a newspaper so she wouldn't interfere with the breakfast interview. She is lovely, too, but she modestly withdraws into a shadowy background in honor of this fairest of sisters.

SOME OF HER JEWELS.

Marilynn's hair is bobbed, silky gold, the brightness of which contrasts startingly with her black eyelashes. She wore a brown Canton crepe gown embroidered with silk the same way an alligator is marked. She wore a watch with a network of diamonds, through which a black ribbon hung, and it was the gift of her first husband, Frank Carter. On her ring finger she wore Mr. Carter's circlet of diamonds and Jack's engagement ring, a square cut diamond, exquisitely set.

On top of that she is going to wear another circlet with the diamonds cut square. She adores Jack but she becomes tearful at mention of Frank Carter, her first husband, who was killed in a motor accident.

"I suppose New York wanted me to marry a big, fat old man, with piles and piles of money. Well, money doesn't mean a thing to me. Jack is making quite a lot of it, really. And with what I make, I guess we can keep the wolves from howling about our doorsteps," she giggled.

Suddenly Marilynn crossed her arms lightly and told me it was an effort not to scream out, she was so happy.

"But I wish this wedding were over. You don't know how I dread it—this turn-turn to turn—you know, and the formality of it all.

"With all the stage experience I've had, I'm fussed to death about the wedding. I'm glad though, that Mrs. Carter, Frank's mother, is going to be there. My mother is going on with me, and Jack's mother will be there—I love her."

FINED $50 FOR MISLEADING COPS

Frederick Sturm of Allston doesn't relish traffic officers with hawk eyes and long memories. These traits, possessed by the traffic man at Roxbury Crossing, resulted in Judge Hayden fining Sturm $50 in Roxbury court yesterday, $10 for overspeeding and $50 for giving a wrong address June 29. Sturm gave his address as No. 19 Brighton avenue, Allston, when stopped, but the police were unable to serve the summons at that address. The same traffic officer then nailed Sturm as his car was passing the same corner Friday.

OLD GUARD IN SENATE TUMBLING

Stand-Patters, Riddled by Tariff Votes, Fear the Loss of Power

By JAMES R. NOURSE
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 22.—Insurgency having lifted its head within the ranks of the Republicans in the Senate, old guard leaders are now facing a new danger which threatens their control over the party organization in a very menacing manner.

These leaders, already engaged in a desperate and seemingly losing struggle against the wave of progressivism sweeping over the States in which senatorial primaries have been held, find themselves confronted with a break within the party organization more serious than any that has occurred within the last few years.

It was bad enough, from the Old Guard point of view, to lose the primaries in one other favorite candidates defeated in Indiana, Iowa, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Nebraska; but to have the "boys" in the Senate go back on them, jump clear off the reservation and vote down some of the tariff increases that were written into the bill as a sop to the protected interests which had won the favor of the Republican organization, meant that the spirit of rebellion had invaded the Senate itself, and this is more than the Old Guard generals and captains can afford to stand.

EMBARGO HAD NO CHANCE.

The insurgent movement began when the embargo provisions to keep all foreign dyes out of the United States was rejected with the assistance of a considerable number of the Republican Senators voting with the solid Democratic membership. Old Guard leaders had premised this embargo section to Senator Frelinghuysen to help him out in his fight for re-election in New Jersey. Frelinghuysen himself led the fight for it, but with such Republicans as Borah, Capper, Cummins, Harreld, Johnson, Kellogg, McCormick, Nelson, Moses, Nicholson, Norbeck, Morris and Smoot voting against it, the embargo had no chance, and Frelinghuysen's pet amendment was cast out of the bill and will remain out.

Again the force of the insurgents was demonstrated when the cotton schedule was reached and a wide swath was cut in the high rates which had been written into the bill to favor the cotton manufacturers. Lenroot of Wisconsin led the attack on this schedule as Moses of New Hampshire had done on the embargo, and was equally successful. Such terrific raids were made on the cotton rates that the entire schedule had to be revised downward in a fashion that outraged the sensibilities of the Old Guard leaders responsible for instituting the higher rates.

BLOW IN THE PRIMARIES.

While this was going on, voters throughout the States were preparing for another whack at the Old Guard candidates for the Senate, succeeding in two notable instances in bringing about the nomination of Progressive candidates. Frazier's victory over McCumber in North Dakota and Howell's triumph over Jefferis, Old Guard candidate in Nebraska, came while the Senate was in the throes of the rate slashing movements of the Senate Insurgents.

There are twenty-seven Senatorial primaries yet to be held. In some of them the Old Guard leaders are faintly hoping for success. It looks bad for them in New Jersey, in Michigan, in Delaware, and in Wisconsin. It looks even worse for them in other States in the November election, for should the Old Guard be successful in naming its candidates in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Maryland, Utah and New York, the chances of the Democrats electing their nominees in those States are exceptionally good.

The Republicans are reasonably certain to elect their candidates in Pennsylvania, where two are to be chosen; Maine, California and Wisconsin, although in the latter State it is conceded that Robert M. La-Follette, always a thorn to the regular organization, will win.

SITUATION DESPERATE.

So desperate has become the situation with respect to the senatorial contests that the Republican organization has changed tactics for the campaign and has turned the entire direction of the fight over to the national committee. Senator McCormick of Illinois, chairman of the senatorial committee, is co-operating daily with John T. Adams, chairman of the national committee, and is permitting Adams to have charge of the collection of funds, the sending out of literature, assignment of speakers and such matters. Already a call for help for Senator Frelinghuysen in New Jersey has resulted in the sending of Senators "Jim" Watson of Indiana and Frank Willis of Ohio into that State to deliver speeches for him.

Saves Girl As Auto Plunges 20 Feet to Creek

Gloucester, July 22.

PLUNGED into a creek when the automobile she was driving was struck by an auto truck and jammed through a fence to topple to the water twenty feet below, Miss Olive Carroll, eighteen, attractive blonde, was dramatically rescued from drowning tonight by her escort, James Powers, nineteen.

Powers, who was riding in the front seat, opened the door of the car and freed himself from the wreckage. With his arm around Miss Carroll he swam ashore. Both suffered minor cuts and bruises.

EDITH TO MEET FATHER GOULD

New York, July 22.—George J. Gould's daughter, Edith, who eloped recently to become Mrs. Carroll Wainwright, sailed with her husband on the Homeric today to visit her father, who startled society a few weeks ago in letting the news leak out in Paris that he had secretly wed Miss Guinevere Sinclair, former actress, May 1.

The Wainwrights will spend several weeks at Mr. Gould's Paris home.

SOMERVILLE MAN IS CHOICE OF Y. P. C. U.

Worcester, July 22.—The national convention of the Young People's Christian Union of the Universalist Church today elected Ernest C. Jones of Somerville, Mass., president; Rev. Ellsworth C. Reamon of St. Paul, vice-president; Louis F. Merlin of New York, secretary and treasurer; Miss Marion Griffith of Minneapolis and Miss Grace Nash of Cincinnati members of the executive board.

FOUR INFANTILE PARALYSIS DEATHS

Providence, July 22.—Four deaths from infantile paralysis in this city have caused officials to warn physicians that similar cases must be reported at once to the State Board and the local health officer of the city in which the case develops. There are fifteen known cases in the State.

WORRIED BY SILENCE OF PETERS

Democrat Leaders Would Like to Know if He Will Try for Governor

Democrat leaders who make Boston their headquarters during the torrid sessions of primary campaigns are beginning to show signs of worry over the silence of ex-Mayor Andrew J. Peters, who will either confirm or deny his candidacy for Governor.

Pressure is being brought to bear on Peters to enter the contest, though it is generally known he is opposed to a strenuous fight for the nomination. But a few weeks remain for him to file enough signatures to place his name on the ballot.

Many leaders insist that with the present candidates, Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, Ex-Governor Foss, Ex-District Attorney Ely and Mayor Sullivan of Worcester, Peters with his long string of victories as Representative, Senator, Congressman and Mayor of the city, would appeal to the voters as the one best bet to upset the Republican stronghold.

ALL KEEPING BUSY.

Meanwhile the other four candidates are busy. Each is nightly claiming that he is the one to defeat the winner of the Cox-Allen contest in November.

While the seat of Senator Lodge is the bigger political plum, present gossip seems to point toward the berth of the Commonwealth's chief executive, but many leaders are beginning to warm up in the contest that will decide whether John Jackson Walsh, Colonel William A. Gaston or Sherman L. Whipple is the man to oppose Lodge.

Of the local fights, the contest for District Attorney for Suffolk County is easily the "big noise," with the present incumbent, Thomas C. O'Brien, the favorite.

EIGHT HAVE FILED PAPERS.

To date the following have filed papers: District Attorney O'Brien, Councillor Foley, Councilman Ford, ex-District Attorney Pelletier, ex-Representative Donaghue, Attorney Patron, Walsh and Soloman A. Cox.

Congressman Tinkham will have no opposition in the primaries, but will be opposed by Councilman David J. Brickley for election. In the 12th district, Congressman Gallivan is opposed for nomination by Senator John J. Carey and John J. Sullivan, while Congressman Tague has a score against him including Senator Tom Donovan, ex-Representative Tom Giblin and possibly ex-Councilman Edward McLaughlin.

FLYER KILLED IN FRAMINGHAM

were flying hit an air pocket and crashed to the ground at the local aviation field. Ralph Miller, a brother of the dead flyer, suffered minor injuries.

Zenoz Miller, who was twenty-four years of age, served during the war in the 27th Pursuit Squadron. In 1918, when his plane fell behind the German lines, he was captured and held in a prison camp until the armistice.

Although Miller's neck was broken and his skull fractured, he lived twenty minutes beneath the fallen machine. The fire department was called to aid in lifting the plane out of the mire, into which it had sunk some ten feet. Miller's body was recovered two hours after the accident.

Dr. Gamble suffered fractures of the left leg, nose and clavicle and concussion of the brain. He is at the Framingham Hospital.

The dead pilot and Dr. Miller were about to start on a flight to California, where the latter's family resides, and to which city Miller's parents are now on their way to spend the Summer.

Dr. Miller was a graduate of Princeton and of Harvard Medical School.

TAMMANY WARMING UP TO O'BRIEN

Hearty Reception to District Attorney by Curley Supporters

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien had his innings at the Mardi Gras of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, which was brought to a close in a blaze of glory at the grounds of the old Roxbury Latin school on Kearsarge avenue, off Warren street, last night.

O'Brien was among the "pols" who visited the affair Friday night. One of his opponents for the Democratic nomination in the primaries to be held in Suffolk County in September, "Billy" Patron, joined with O'Brien in "pumphandling" the throng of "ladies and gentlemen" present and in wishing the undertaking a financial success.

There was much significance in O'Brien's presence, in view of the cordiality with which he was greeted by Mayor Curley's Tammany Club members. John F. Dowd, recently appointed secretary of the Boston Americanization Committee at $5,500 a year by Mayor Curley, took great pains in presenting O'Brien to the "populace," as Chairman O'Driscoll of the committee of arrangements called the patrons.

Dowd's interest in O'Brien led "pals" to suspect that the old Tammany stronghold will swing into the O'Brien column in the coming primaries. Dowd is regarded in Roxbury as Mayor Curley's "right-hand man." O'Brien was highly pleased with the reception he received and showed his appreciation by having his secretary pass out souvenir campaign buttons.

'GIRL PONZI' CHARGES ATTACK

Roughly Dragged From Sick Bed to Be Surrendered in Court

Springfield, July 23.—Olga Nazamble, twenty-eight years old, known as the "female Ponzi," is in a serious condition at Mercy Hospital as a result of being dragged from a sick bed and roughly handled while bandaged following a surgical operation.

The young woman had recently given birth to a child. She was out of jail on $10,000 bail in an alleged financial swindle. Her bondsman was John Chmura of No. 13 Pulaski street, Indian Orchard.

She was roughly handled, it is alleged, when Chmura and five other men, including two police officers, called at her home, No. 28 Garvan street, West Springfield, to surrender her on the bond.

It is charged that the two policemen were standing in the doorway of the woman's bedroom when the attack occurred and that they did not interfere.

TWO WOMEN PRESENT.

Present also at the scene were Catherine Carney, woman probation officer of the district court, and a nurse. A physician who accompanied Chmura's party had declared the woman was physically able to accompany the men to be surrendered. The probation officer and the nurse attempted to stop the men in their rough treatment of the woman.

Neighbors who heard the disturbance notified the police. Chief Marshal A. Belmar hastened to the house and took the names of the men and of the women witnesses. No arrests were made.

One of the men gave his name as Joseph F. Mulligan of No. 23 St. Margaret street, Dorchester. The Nazemblo woman declared that Mulligan was the man who pulled off her night gown in the scuffle.

The nurse corroborated this statement.

RUSH INTO ROOM.

It is charged that the men climbed the stairs to the Nazemblo apartment, threw open the door and rushed into the bedroom. The physician, who first gave his name as "Dr. Francis," but later admitted he was Dr. Henry C. Gerrard of this city, declared Miss Nazemblo was in fit condition to be taken from the house.

Then, despite the protests of the woman probation officer and the nurses, Chmura and his men pulled off the bedclothing and dragged her to the floor, tearing her nightgown and loosening bandages about her body.

The nurse, in trying to prevent this treatment, was knocked down, she charges.

Since giving birth to her child, the Nazemblo woman had been ill and had been operated on several times. A physician who was summoned by the chief of police, examined Miss Nazemblo and declared she was not in a fit condition to be removed from her home.

The names of the policemen who, it is said, stood by and watched the inhuman treatment, are Sergeant Joseph A. Demers and Patrolman Collins. The names of the men who accompanied Chmura, besides Mulligan and Dr. Gerrard, are James A. Nelson, John Riley and James Moriarty.

State Representative Joseph E. King of Springfield, has taken the matter in hand and says he will see that the woman is taken care of and new bail bonds secured. An attorney and members of her family say they will prosecute everybody concerned in the affair.

Leah Silver, Whose "Swamp Baby" Now Has a Sister

'SWAMP BABY' HAS A SISTER

Leah Silver Gives Birth to Second Child in N. Y. Sanitarium

New York, July 22.—Ruth Silver, the baby deserted by her mother in a Coney Island mosquito-infested marsh, has a sister.

The second baby was born to the mother, Leah Silver, Friday, in the Bayridge Sanitarium, Brooklyn. Her mother has named her June Claire Silver.

The nurses said the baby was healthy.

The mother displayed evident pleasure when the child was brought to her every hour to fondle. During that time she gave way to feelings of happiness, but when the child was taken back to the nursery she grieved that she had no clothes for it.

She said, however, she expected her parents at Lynn, Mass., to send her a layette as soon as they learned of the baby's birth.

The mother said that when she is able to leave the sanitarium, in about eight days, she will take the baby with her back to Lynn. If she can, she will also take Ruth, who is at the King's County Hospital, but if not, she is willing that Ruth be adopted. She added:

"I want to go back home and start life all over again. I have made serious mistakes and I have learned my lesson. When I leave here I will take June Claire to Lynn with me and start to work to raise her. If I am able I will also take Ruth along, but if not, I am satisfied to have her adopted into a good home.

"I was young when I left home. I had no schooling to speak of and did not get much chance in life. Dr. Lehrich, who is attending me, is very good, as are all of the nurses and some of the patients."

Offers of marriage from Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, Pa., were not given serious attention by the girl mother. She said:

"I don't want to get married. All I want to do is to go to work and provide a way to raise my children."

'Gas' Reserve Decreasing

New York, July 21.—Although American gasoline refineries are breaking all production records, the reserve supply of "gas" for the nation's automobiles is steadily growing smaller, the American Petroleum Institute reports.

IRREGULARS IN NEW POSITIONS

Following Retreat, Army Makes Stand at Clonmel; More Fighting Likely

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, July 22.—A general defeat for the Irregulars in South Ireland is believed certain at army headquarters here.

Apparently the Irregulars have made Clonmel their headquarters, after their retreat from Limerick, and conflicts are considered possible there, as well as at Mallow and Fermoy.

Though they hold Cork City their force there is not believed to be strong.

Although normal life prevails in Dublin, there has been a serious increase in ambushing, sniping and other guerilla activities, aimed at the National troops, but frequently resulting in injury to civilians.

ATTACK FOUR COURTS HOTEL.

The National troops at Howth have been four times attacked and are hampered in restating by the presence of campers and summer visitors.

Heavy firing occurred today when a party of men, armed with rifles and machine guns, attacked the Four Courts Hotel, adjoining the ruins of the Four Courts Building, held by the National army forces. The assailants fired from across the Liffey River, but finally withdrew.

The prisoners captured by the National army total 150, including the leader of the City Brigade and members of the Irregular headquarters staff. The Nationalists lost four killed and eleven wounded.

In Limerick the irregulars are reported to have lost twenty killed and many wounded.

Priest With Bottle Fights Off Raiders

Belfast, July 21 (By the Associated Press).—All the south of Ireland banks in Dundalk were raided by armed bands today and several hundred pounds sterling carried off. Three raiders were captured.

Father Donnelian, a parish priest, prevented the raiders making a big haul at the Munster and Leinster bank. Although a revolver was pressed to his chest, he seized a heavy ink bottle and wielded it against the raiders.

At the Hibernian Bank, Miss O'Connell, a clerk, seized one robber, who dragged her to the floor and struck her a blow on the cheek, inflicting a severe injury.

Seeks U.S. Senate Seat on an Anti-Satan Platform

By Universal Service.

Nashville, Tenn., July 22.

NOAH W. COOPER expects to carry 96 gourds to Washington next March.

There will be one for each of the 96 Senators. They will be "gourds of righteousness, a symbol of the wish that we might all join hands and hearts and votes to help America quit drinking with Satan from the poison pots of death and to drink anew with the God of our fathers from the healing fountains of eternal truth," Cooper declares.

Whether Cooper will embark on his mission depends on the Democratic voters of Tennessee, who hold their Senatorial primary August 3.

WALSH SCORES 'PROFIT' DUTIES

Wool Tariff Proposed as Guarantee to Growers Is Denounced

Washington, July 22. — The 32 cents a pound duty on scoured wool proposed in the administration tariff bill would enable wool producers to make an average profit of 10 per cent. a year over a period of five years, Senator Bursum, Republican, New Mexico, declared today in the Senate.

Senator Walsh, Massachusetts, in charge of the Democratic fight on the schedule, declared this was the first time he had ever heard it proposed in the Senate to guarantee the profits of producers through a tariff law.

Senator Smoot, Utah, said the question of guaranteeing any profit had not entered the minds of the committee. He argued Senator Bursum's position was that sheep raising is a hazardous business and under the duty proposed the profits could not exceed ten per cent.

FIRST WOMAN AIDE TO U. S. EMBASSY SAILS

San Francisco, July 22.—The first woman attache to an American embassy in the Orient, Miss Maud Miles of Erie, Pa., cleared the Golden Gate today when the Pacific mail liner President Lincoln left for the Far East.

Miss Miles' appointment to the Tokio Embassy came in recognition of her efficiency when she was secretary to the advisory committee of the Washington arms conference. Others sailing today included William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

DANCER'S DIARY SHOWS WHITNEY OFTEN PROMISED TO WED

FORMER "FOLLIES" BEAUTY AND "SONNY" WHITNEY

ADMITTED HER BABY WAS HIS

So Says Miss Fontaine in Her Record of Millionaire's Love

OFTEN VISITED HIS PARENTS AT HOME

First Met Scion of Vanderbilts at Ritz Carlton Ball

New York, July 22.—A diary full of passion, love and the little details which sweethearts cherish will play a prominent part in the suits which Miss Evan Burrows Fontaine has brought against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

It was written by Miss Fontaine and later sworn to by her before a notary. Here it is with parts omitted for obvious reasons:

"I was first introduced to Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney," she says, "by Stephen Sanford at a ball, the Bal Bleu, a dance given by Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, in March, 1919.

"I saw him every week-end after that and he wrote me every day. We went to several parties at the Vanderbilt Hotel and many prominent men were with us.

"Two weeks after that he asked me to come up to New Haven. I went up several times after that. Sometimes Mr. Whitney would slip away from college and motor down to see me during the week.

PROPOSED IN 1919.

"At a big dinner given by Tudor Wilkinson at the Vanderbilt in April, 1919, Mr. Whitney first asked me to marry him.

"This was about a month after I first met him. I refused to marry him at the time and when he insisted upon a reason I told him I was married to Sterling L. Adair of Houston, Texas. That was a war romance.

"Whitney wanted to know if we were living together. I said we were not. He insisted I consult an attorney at once. He stated he would pay any expenses that might be incurred.

"Finally I secured, in July, 1920, an annulment of my marriage to Mr. Adair in the Supreme Court, Rockland County, on the ground that he had not told me of a previous marriage which had not been annulled.

"During the winter of 1919 and 1920 I went to New Haven with Mr. Whitney at most every week-end. He would come down for the week-end and we would go up in his Stutz car so that he might be in time for school at 8 o'clock Monday morning. He always sent me back by train.

VISITED WHITNEY HOME.

"On a number of occasions we would visit the home of the Whitneys and have tea or luncheon there. On two of those occasions my mother was with me.

"I also visited the country home of the Whitneys at Roslyn, as well as at the home of his uncle, Payne Whitney, on a number of occasions. Mr. Whitney gave parties in the swimming pool at Roslyn when his father was away. As I told Mr. Whitney's father afterward, I used to protest against going there when the family was away.

"In January, 1920, I stopped off at New Haven to see Mr. Whitney. We had had a quarrel. I took all of his letters and met him at the Hotel Taft, where he was eating luncheon with his sister.

"I asked him to return my letters, offering to return his. He refused to accept the letters and after a long argument we made up."

AS MAN AND WIFE.

Miss Fontaine's affidavit then enters into a long description of how they—she and Sonny Whitney—missed a train to New York and finally registered at a hotel in New Haven as man and wife, he, she says, using the name of "Crane."

Miss Fontaine enters into details of life at the Hotel Pennsylvania, where Sonny, she says, slept on a couch in the sitting room on his week-end trips, always making the early train for New Haven Monday morning. She tells of his arranging for her to have the use of his automobile when he went hunting in the Canadian Rockies. Then she picks up the thread again:

"The day after the Princeton boat race in May, 1920, we met by appointment at the Hotel Algonquin and then went for a ride in the Packard car. I then told him that I was soon to become a mother.

"He said, 'Well, we'll wait until after school, after the Yale-Harvard race, and I'll come down and we'll be married.'

"I did not see him again until October, 1920, when my mother, my grandfather and I met him in the Hotel Taft at New Haven. He then said in their presence that he would come down on Sunday and we would get married.

NOTIFIED OF BIRTH.

"If the course of a conversation this morning. I am naming it (for he said he knew it was his baby and that he would have married me long ago if it had not been for the objections of his family. He said he was awfully sorry for what had happened, as he had hoped to get married as we planned.

"I have never seen him since that day.

"The baby was born December 14, 1920, in the Lying-in Hospital, New York. I was attended by Dr. Ross McPherson and I ordered a telegram sent to Mr. Whitney at New Haven, which read:

"'Our little son was born at 2:20 nelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Jr. Always, Evan.'

"I have never heard from him since that date and he has never seen the baby.

"On Mr. Whitney's birthday I sent him a picture of myself and the baby. On the outside of the cover I wrote: 'From two who love you.' On the inside I pinned a copy of a poem we used to read together from the Indian Love Lyrics called 'Lalila, to the Ferengi Lovers.'"

ACCUSED OF TRYING TO BRIBE OFFICER

Joseph Weiner, twenty-nine years old, of No. 8 Union Park street, South End, was arrested last night, charged with attempting to bribe Patrolman Patrick F. Healey. Weiner was bailed on $200 bonds. According to the police, Patrolman Healey visited Weiner's place of business where he found a boy tieing up half pints of whiskey in packages. It is alleged Weiner offered Healey six dollars to keep the matter out of court.

KANSAS EDITOR TO BE TRIED IN FALL

Emporia, Kansas, July 22 (By the Associated Press).—Awarrant charging William Allen White, author and editor, with violation of the industrial court law in displaying a placard sympathizing with the striking shopmen, was issued in District Court here late today.

Mr. White, through his attorney, immediately made bond for his appearance when the case is called for trial in District Court next October.

DANCER SUES C. V. WHITNEY

though three months before he had urged me to marry him in spite of the fact that he was still a college student.

"It was then that I refused. Had I agreed then, there would not have been this trouble. All I want is a marriage ceremony to give 'Sonny, Jr.' a name. My baby is entitled to that."

She was asked:

"It is said your lawyers wanted a $500,000 settlement."

"I do not know about that. I do know this: I do not want a dollar of the Whitney millions for myself. I want 'Sonny, Jr.' to have an education and a fair start in life at least.

"I can make as much money on the stage in seven days as he can, unaided by his father, in seven years."

PROUD OF "SONNY, JR."

And at mention of the baby, a radiant smile lighted her features. She was all enthusiasm at once. She went on:

"You ought to see him. He is about nineteen months old. He was born December 14, 1920, but he is big and husky for his age. He wears the clothes of a three-year-old and is full of mischief. He is with my mother, Florence Fontaine, at New Gardens, Long Island. She adores him."

And then the dancer advanced the unique bit of philosophy:

"I think that young married couples should turn over their first child to the grandparents of either side. Our engagement was a secret one, but all of his friends at Yale knew of it.

"He gave me a diamond studded bracelet during the wooing and also a ring, but I lost that from my handbag in a department store. I still have the bracelet, but not with me.

"I believe Sonny would come to me if it was not for his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. She wants him to marry a girl in his own social set and she dominates the household.

"I have met his father often and danced with him. Harry Payne Whitney is a regular fellow. He told me that he would much rather see his son marry me than one of New York's "Four Hundred," because I had so much sense and such good judgment.

"He put the situation to me like this, saying he'd like to see me and his boy marry, but—you know, and he gave a significant shrug of his shoulders."

There was a twinkle of merriment in the girl's lustrous brown eyes, and she smiled reminiscently. She went on:

"I found out that he was right. Sonny is easily led, easily influenced and it a typical rich man's son, dominated by his mother.

"I saw him last in San Francisco, the latter part of the week. He telephoned me at my hotel and, speaking of his mother, said:

"'She has ruined my life and yours, too.'

"And what did you answer him?"

TIED TO APRON STRINGS.

"I told him she might ruin his life, but that she was not going to ruin mine—and she won't." The brown eyes flashed fire.

"Of course I'm not going to get married—that is, for several years."

And then she paited a word picture of "Sonny."

"He's a kindly, amiable young man. He means well, but he doesn't really know what it is all about—he doesn't realize that he is a father. He has no initiative, no ambition. He does not know what it means to do a day's work, to earn a dollar for himself. He is hopelessly tied to his mother's apron strings. I guess that sums it up in a nutshell, in so far as he is concerned."

She paused a moment and, looking down, watched the stream of traffic in Fifth street.

Pressed for reasons for her sojourn in Los Angeles, Miss Fontaine was evasive. She said:

"I got so tired of New York, and I have always liked California. I have been here several times. Once I appeared at the Orpheum here. I left the 'Spice of 1922' company to come West. I was tired out and my nerves were on edge.

WON'T GO IN PICTURES.

"I had hoped to get some rest here, but all this publicity broke loose. I don't know who started it, or anything about it. I haven't seen my attorney, Senator Edgar Brackett, for two months."

Asked if she knew Miss Marie Norton, daughter of Mrs. Sheridan Norton, of New York, to whom Whitney is reported to be engaged, she said she did, but that the acquaintance was not an intimate one.

Asked is she believed Whitney was in Southern California, she said:

"I do not know. It is possible he may be in this part of the country visiting relatives."

She denied she had any intention of entering pictures in Hollywood. She has appeared in three films, she said, but did not find the work congenial.

Will Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, son of Harry Payne Whitney, marry Evan Burrows Fontaine, who has taken legal action against him. Society asks how he can when he has given his word to marry another girl. Miss Fontaine has decided notions of her own on this question. She says he must—and points to the eighteen-month-old boy. That's the answer, she says. She demands that his name—she calls him "Whitney, Junior" — be legalized by the courts. Photo by Pacific and Atlantic, Inc.

MISS FONTAINE WANTS $500,000

SENATOR BRACKETT QUITS AS DANCER'S COUNSEL

New York, July 22.—Blackmail charges today entered the remarkable case of Evans-Burrows Fontaine, interpretive dancer, who is suing Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Miss Fontaine names young Whitney as the father of her 18-months-old son, named Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Jr.

The Whitneys have made repeated efforts to settle the case out of court, but Miss Fontaine held out for $500,000 and a name for the baby. The action, it is said, charges breach of promise.

Mrs. Florence E. Fontaine, who first told of the legal action, today made the blackmail charges. She said:

"When my daughter's baby was three weeks old we were awakened early one morning by a telephone call from a man who declared he must see us immediately. The man was Sterling Adair, a sailor, whose home is in Texas and whom my daughter had married in April, 1919, and from whom she had applied for a divorce the following month, the papers being filed several months later.

"We dressed and received him. He declared that the child was his and that he still was married to my daughter, which she denied indignantly. After a discussion he led us into another room and then whispered: 'You'll be sorry.' Two dictaphones, with four men listening, are concealed in that room, trying to get evidence for a blackmail plot.

"We left at five o'clock that same morning, but before I left I found one of the dictaphones, which I cut loose.

"The others I looked for later but only could discover the place from which it had been cut away. We went to Patterson where we received a wire later that Adair had been shot and killed in a house in Dallas, Texas. The coroner returned a verdict of suicide. This was in January 1921."

The engagement of Whitney and Miss Marie Norton of Westbury will not be affected by the sensational suit of Miss Fontaine.

Sheridan S. Norton, father of Whitney's fiancee, said to a reporter for the Advertiser today at his law office:

"I am not a bit interested in what Mr. Whitney did five years ago."

It is learned that the suit Miss Fontaine has brought, or is to bring, against Whitney is for breach of promise.

BRACKETT WITHDRAWS.

Former State Senator Edgar T. Brackett, making good his threat to abandon the case if it were "tried in the newspapers," withdrew today as Miss Fontaine's attorney.

At his office in Saratoga Springs it was learned that one of the things upon which Miss Fontaine depends for success in her suit is a diary she has kept faithfully since her first meeting with Whitney. It chronicles every meeting with him and every incident of their relationship. The diary, it is said, tells romantically of the first meeting and of the two having fallen in love at first sight. It is said there is also a batch of letters, now in possession of an attorney.

Mrs. Florence E. Fontaine, the dancer's mother, who made the first announcement of the suit, the publication of which resulted in Brackett's withdrawal from the case, disappeared from her home at Kew Gardens today, leaving this message with a servant:

"Tell anyone who asks for a statement that I haven't anything to say, as I've probably said too much already."

Mrs. Fontaine, it was said, had gone to friends in New Jersey.

Sheridan S. Norton's statement ran:

"I haven't the slightest interest in that crowd. They don't exist, so far as I am concerned.

"TRY FOR BIG MONEY."

"It's the old story. They are making a try for big money. If young Whitney's father were not a wealthy man nothing would ever have been heard of this.

"If all the Follies girls were to have babies and the fathers were simply Tom, Dick and Harry, that would be the end of it.

"I have been practicing law in this city for twenty-five years and I have seen a lot of just this kind of a thing. It is not a new game.

"They no doubt are trying their case in the newspapers and like the notoriety."

He will be adopted with elaborate ceremonies during the next few days. The President had no objection to a mountain peak on the Indian Reservation being named Mount Harding.

WOULD LET HER SUICIDE GIRL DIE'

Mother Angry Because Daughter Deceived Her in Marirage Plans

"LINA" TOOK POISON, THEN INHALED GAS

Did It to Leave Parent, She Says, After Storm in East Boston Home

Harken to the amazing philosophy of life and mother love of Mrs. Mary Delespro, thirty-eight, of No. 159 Havre street, East Boston, who wishes death upon her own daughter, Pasqualina, eighteen. And all because the mother opposed the approaching marriage of her daughter.

Pasqualina is in East Boston Relief Station after attempting suicide yesterday by swallowing iodine and inhaling illuminating gas.

"I hope Lina does die," said Mrs. Delespro. "It will serve her right. She has lied to me. I asked her last night if she had taken out marriage intentions to marry a young fellow they called Louie and she said she had not. She promised not to marry him. He is no good. But today she told me she was going to marry him. And then we quarreled."

DESERVED NO BETTER.

"Lina had everything a girl could wish for, but she would not obey her parents. I gave her all the clothes she could wear and always gave her money. But she would not mind me, and she has lied to me. She deserves to die," added Mrs. Delespro.

The trouble started last night, police say, when Mrs. Delespro learned from outside sources that the girl was to wed. She says the daughter denied it; Mrs. Delespro demanded that Lina bring Louie to the house, that she might meet him. The girl refused and the storm broke.

Lina went to her bedroom and took a mouthful of iodine from a bottle. But it was too bitter, so she spit it out. Then she turned on the gas and laid down to die. But she was only doing it, she said, to frighten her mother.

When her mother did not enter the room, Lina, alarmed, went to her mother's bedroom and called her.

LIFE LOOKS GOOD TO HER.

"Good-bye, mother, good-bye," cried Lina. "I'm going to end it all." And she toppled across the bed, seemingly lifeless.

Mrs. Delespro called the police and the girl was removed to East Boston Relief Station. She will recover.

Smiling on her hospital cot, a few hours later, Lina said:

"I don't want to die. I didn't mean to die. I only did it to scare mother. But I love Louie, and I'm going to marry him just the same."

WONDERFUL BABIES WIN K. OF C. CUPS

In the class to four years, Madeline Brooks of 47 Cameron avenue, and Edith Mitchell of 116 Dudley street, North Cambridge, took the prizes.

SUSPECT DETAINED IN SALEM BOY MURDER

HOLD SUSPECT IN SLAYING

search for the slayer of twelve-year-old Henry P. McMahon of No. 65 Boston street, whose body was found hidden behind a boulder in Half-Mile Pasture Friday afternoon by berry pickers.

The city marshal urged every man and boy who could possibly spare the time to join what promises to be one of the biggest man-hunts ever conducted in Massachusetts. Volunteers were asked to report in front of police headquarters in Salem at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. The invitation was also open to citizens of adjoining cities and towns who cared to take part.

The Salem authorities seemed convinced tonight that the fiend who lured the McMahon boy into the lonely pasture and beat his head into a pulp with stones, is still hiding in the woods or marshes in that vicinity. It was decided late today that the precaution should be taken of combing every foot of the open country in the search for the tall foreigner who was seen strolling down Highland avenue with the McMahon boy at 3:30 Tuesday, the day he disappeared.

While the record of the Lynn suspect who is locked up on the charge of "suspicion of murder" and other evidence, tends to implicate him, the officials seemed tonight to doubt that Krikos Petriam is McMahon's slayer.

It was learned that Petriam was arrested on the testimony of a motorman on a Lynn-Salem car who claimed to have seen Petriam leave Half-Mile Pasture last Tuesday afternoon about an hour after the McMahon boy had been seen on Highland avenue with a strange man. This fact and the claim of the Lynn police that Petriam has been involved in other cases in which complainants were boys, caused the authorities to hold Petriam, pending developments.

Petriam is forty-six years of age and lodges at No. 41 Mulberry street, Lynn. He claims his landlady can prove an alibi. Mrs. Margaret Creen of Highland avenue, and her son Walter, aged thirteen, who saw Henry McMahon and a strange man pass their house Tuesday afternoon, were taken to Salem police headquarters tonight and confronted the suspect Petriam. They are reported to have told the police that he did not resemble the man they saw with Henry McMahon.

A conductor on a Boston & Maine train told the police tonight that Petriam was involved in some sort of trouble with another male passenger on a train Friday afternoon.

Tomorrow morning the posses, three in number and made up of armed citizens, will scour the woods and marshes for the murderer of the boy.

"There is no doubt but what this brute is hiding in the swamp land or woods," said Marshal O'Leary late today. We will organize big searching parties and not a foot of hiding space will be missed."

Krikos Petriam, known as "Babe," the Lynn eccentric held as a suspect, was grilled for two hours today by the Lynn police.

Following the questioning it was stated there was sufficient evidence against him to warrant holding him. He was brought to Salem to be questioned further.

A reward of $1,000 for the capture of the slayer has been announced by Mayor Sullivan and has caused scores of citizens to join in the hunt.

In the early afternoon City Marshal O'Leary and District Attorney Donnell called on the State police for aid and two members of the State force were rushed to the city.

It is now generally believed that the man who caved in young McMahon's skull was a figure who had been seen, off and on for the past year, in the woods around Salem.

On Wednesday, the day after Henry disappeared from his home, the man believed to have slain the boy was seen by Joseph Emmett of Lynn.

On the several occasions that the police received reports of his appearance it was said that he had come out of the woods, naked, to frighten some passing boy or girl, and that he disappeared into the woods when an alarm was raised.

Nathaniel Estes of No. 9 Ocean View avenue, Salem, was the person who last saw the man believed to be the perpetrator of the hideous crime.

"I noticed him," he said, "in the elderberry bushes of the pasture, dressed only in a union suit of underwear.

"I approached him and remonstrated at his appearance. I told him there were many houses nearby, and that he would be sure to be seen. haggard, but I thought that it was

"I noticed that he looked wild and simply a case of a man who had been drinking too much. He disappeared into the bushes."

BULLET CAUSED DEATH OF ALICE JONES; NEW ARREST IN MYSTERY NOW HINTED

Strangulation Followed Flow of Blood From Wound; Two Men to Be Questioned

The mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Alice I. Jones, whose bruised and mutilated body was found in her rooms at No. 556 Tremont street, South End, was deepened yesterday with the announcement of the medical examiner that her death was due to strangulation.

This announcement may result in the release of the man now held for her murder, one George H. Mansfield, who had lived with the woman for several years, and the arrest of another party.

As a result of an autopsy performed on the body, Medical Examiner Leary found a bullet wound in her head, made by a 32-calibre revolver. The bullet itself was subsequently located embedded deep in her head. Medical Examiner Leary states that the sudden rush of blood clogged in her throat, preventing breathing, and as a result she died from internal strangulation.

On Friday last the body of Mrs. Jones, decomposed and bearing the marks of terrific punishment, was found in her apartment by Daniel Purslow. According to friends, Mansfield and Mrs. Jones had lived together for several years, each leaving their married partner and children for the sake of the great love they discovered anew.

Mrs. Jones left her husband, Percy W. Jones, a Haverhill paperhanger, and their young daughter Dorothy. Mansfield in turn left his wife and two children in Everett to follow Mrs. Jones.

This was about three years ago. Since that hour the couple never went near their relatives nor called to see their children.

Medical Examiner Leary explained to newspaper men that the reason he did not perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Jones the night it was discovered was to preserve the body intact that it might be the more easily identified, beyond all positive doubt, by the relatives of the woman.

Accordingly it was identified first by her husband, Percy W. Jones, and later by her sister, Mrs. Joseph W. Brown of Natick. Mrs. Brown also identified the rings worn by Mrs. Jones which were found on the dead woman's body.

Meanwhile details of the first romance of Mrs. Jones and her subsequent love for Mansfield were revealed.

NEW ERA OF LOVE.

An art school student, such was the personality with which Percy Jones fell in love when he courted Mrs. Jones. But she chose her course of study with a final destiny, for she studied wall paper designing. While on a tour of inspection of a paper manufactory, she met her husband, Percy Jones. Friendship, courtship, love, sunsets and symphonies—and then marriage.

Life was yet to be lived.

For years she lived with her husband as true as the glow of her youthful love for him, until three years ago, when the Kismetic wallpaper enters her life again. Jones' father called in Mansfield to have the house repapered.

Mansfield met Mrs. Jones.

A new era in her life opened. The one great love in her life had arrived, and leaving husband and her baby girl, Dorothy, in Haverhill, she fled with Mansfield to Boston. Mansfield himself deserted his wife and two children.

Since their flight, the couple had lived at 556 Tremont street, South End.

Jones says his wife was a chronic tippler, and she found a helpful partner in Mansfield.

But the evidence disclosed by Medical Examiner Leary tends to disprove the theory that the couple lived together in one grandiose anti-Volstead existence. He says that the home of Mrs. Jones at 556 Tremont street was not the home of the drunkard; that is was orderly, clean sweet, that the chests were full of linen, that the beds were freshly chambered.

Attorney William E. Weeks, counsel for Mansfield, declares his client can furnish a positive alibi that he was in Bedford, Mass., on the day Mrs. Jones was last seen alive. The police, however, refused to release Mansfield even on bail.

TO BE QUESTIONED AGAIN.

Jones, who was en route to Natick to visit his daughter and to be present for the funeral, has not put in an appearance there yet. He is to be questioned again by the police, as well as Purslow, the man who found the body. Purslow claims Mrs. Jones confided to him several times that his wife was empty and she intended to end it all. Police, however, offset this with the statement that Mrs. Jones wrote frequently to her daughter Dorothy, in Natick, and betrayed no such emotions in her letters. The mailman also adds that she was the merriest person on his route.

Mrs. Joseph Brown, sister of the dead woman, was closeted with Captain Driscoll, of Station 5, for more than an hour, and it is understood that a group of inspectors have been sent to Wellesley to check up evidence unearthed in the case. Station 5 is also making an investigation of the case.

EXPRESSED HOPE TO WED HER 'HONEY BOY'

Mrs. Alice Irene Jones, whose body was found in her small apartment at No. 556 Tremont street, was a woman of tender sentiment as disclosed in love letters which she addressed to George Harry Mansfield, accused by the police of killing the woman.

Mansfield was "Boy o' Mine" in the age old triangle of love and romance. Although the finger of suspicion points to him as the slayer of his former sweetheart, fourteen year-old Dorothy Jones, daughter of the murdered woman, has rushed to the side of Mansfield and declares that he is a victim of circumstances.

Here are a few of the letters written by Mrs. Jones to her man. They breathe the spirit of tender love and an affection that cannot be questioned:

SAW HIM IN DREAMS.

"February 8, 1919.

"No. 10 Victoria street, West Somerville, Mass.

"My Dearie—Your letter arrived yesterday forenoon, and perhaps you don't think I was glad to hear from you. You see, I would like to get a letter every mail—and then not satisfied."

"You certainly wrote a nice long letter. Are you trying to beat me out? Have to go some.

"Everything is just the same here. I have been trying to keep busy with housework and sewing and I sure have done a lot. I have kept my machine in the kitchen for the past two weeks, so as to have it handy.

"When I got your laundry I noticed the shirt needed mending, so did it as well as I could and your wrinkle the shirt. But I imagine the crowd up there will not notice a few wrinkles. I got your union suit and it was the lightest weight I could get, and even at that it is lighter than those you are wearing, but I guess it will not feel uncomfortable up there.

"I did not do as you said you would like me to do in reference to W.— After seeing so many pieces in the paper tens of which I will enclose I thought if I did, they (the station men) would naturally shake the bundle, and then 'good night.' You wouldn't even get your union suit and shirt. But when you return I will have some for you here—and, by the way—one question you did not answer. Are you going to be sure and come here first, before anywhere else. And you didn't tell me whether you wanted me to meet you somewhere in North Station.

"Well, honey, how I do wish I could see you—and I do see you at night—for just as soon as I fall asleep I start dreaming of you.

WOULDN'T CROSS HIM.

"Don't you think, too, dearie, if I had sent that up, if it were advisable, that if the bosses had noticed on either you or Hardy Waugh —and naturally they would as long as there is not any there—it probably would have been uncomfortable for both of you. If you think I am wrong, tell me, and I will send some up later. I don't ever want to do anything to have you cross with me.

"The first signature in my last letter—if I remember right, was 'Jennie' (French for XXX wife'). Is that the one you mean? And I always am and will be, and also have been since you left. Glad!

"Don't forget, if possible, to make up that set for our bed.

"Be sure you don't forget to write a card to McLean—and it will sure be a nice shop for you to return to—so much better, in my opinion, than Laurence's. But, honey boy, vacation comes first, and then you may have another after the first.

"I am going to enclose a piece of flannel in the bundle in case you might need it in mending your underwear—and be sure you don't leave the other two sets up there, either. Also I will put in two or three holders—I should have given you some before you left. They may come in handy.

LEGS FOR EARLY ANSWER.

"Miss C. written you about the beating up Ralph got a couple of, weeks ago? P. was at his father's, and he said the four or five fellows 'down the line,' who had a grudge against him, got him on Malcolm's Corner and beat him up for fair—so much so that the R. said he was going to take it in court. It is only a pity that they didn't finish him. If they had it would have made Everett a great deal cleaner, morally.

"I am going to the square this afternoon to send your parcel, so you will probably receive it about the time you receive your letter. Do write again soon, dear boy. Don't you so long between each writing, dear, for I look forward to them so much.

"Aunt Jennie was over day before yesterday (Tuesday), and spent the latter part of the afternoon. She did not come to see F. as he has had to work every night this week but one and expects to tonight. When he comes home I am generally sound asleep.

"If you ever get a day off to come to Boston I don't think I could ever let you go back, and perhaps you wouldn't want to.

"Well, honey boy, it is about time for Dorothy to return from school and I must cook her dinner. Don't you wish you were back here cooking with me?

"Now, Harry boy; don't make it so long before you answer this, please, for I am so lonesome, but I have tried not to cry any since that time I wrote you (2).

"By-by, dearie, and I hope before many more weeks I will be in your arms.

"With everything for you, dear, I am, Ever yours,

"Rene '."

"TERRIBLY LONESOME."

"My Dearie: Have you wondered or worried at not hearing from me? I have not been well, honey, for a week or more, as Percy, Dorothy and Papa can say. I think it is because I am so terribly lonesome, dear. I don't care about anything. I don't bother to eat much, and consequently I faint away with surprising regularity. I don't even look as well as I did when you left.

"I thank you for the two parcels you sent. Have not tried the egg yet, but will today. Talk about how things travel. Yesterday P. was in Everett, saw his father, also Frank, who was calling there. Frank said he met Carrie in town one evening last week and she told him where you were and what you had sent her parcel post, and all of the news she could, and on Saturday night Frank said he met Jack Lawrence and he supplied the rest of the news, where you were, who you were working for, who you were up there with. Just where Milton was—and probably finished up with how much your salary was.

"Bonus (???) friend. I don't think. The quickest you shed his and Frank's friendship, the better off you will be.

"You know that I told you that I had mailed to Carrie a sample of Kitchen Bouquet, as I did also to Gertie. Well, when I came home yesterday she said Gertie had received here, with a letter enclosed stating that Mrs. Jones had requested a sample be sent. Good night.

"If that same note was sent to the Eliots, the bouquet is probably in the ash barrel.

"Percy had a birthday, yesterday. Forty-one. We're sure not getting younger, are we?

JUST A LUCKY ESCAPE.

"Dear Harry, how much longer do you think you will be there? When I was in the North Station the other day to mail your parcel, I felt just like boarding a train for Milton—and by the way it sure was very lucky thing I did not enclose what you wished, as when I passed the parcel to the agent, the first thing he did was shake it, and then asked me what it contained. If there had been anything of that nature in it, I probably would have a repetition of Christmas (1916), and alone, at that.

"Did you go to the dance, last Friday, dear? I was wondering and thinking all the evening if you did or did not—Heney—(still true). Don't be cross, dear.

"But if you weren't, I don't think I would want to live. Dear, please write me soon. I don't think I can write much more—I do not feel well I will go and lie down for a little while, all alone, and wishing for my Hubby. My goodness, I will not let you go ever, I don't think. If I can only have you again.

"I will end this now. Later on, if I feel better, I will write a few lines more. So, dearie, think of me often and come hoite to.

"WI——"

CAT LOOKED SO FUNNY.

"Monday Morning, 9:30 A. M.

"Dear Heart—Once more I am going to write just a few lines. It is awfully cold, or at least I am. I have been almost inside the oven.

"How did your union suit fit, dear? Was it the right kind? The reason I mailed it in Boston is that there is no P. O. in Teele Square now and I sure did not feel like walking to Davis Square, so I took a car for the city.

"By the way, another thing, Carrie told Frank. She said she found a pocketbook containing $2 in it the other night and turned it over to two policemen. Frank asked her why she did it and she said, 'Why, it was only $2 in it.' And he told her they (the officer would be in just the) much, for, in all probability would keep it.

"Our cat, you know, disappeared the Tuesday after you left and returned the following Saturday. Nothing apparently seems to be the matter. But the last week she has developed a swollen face—and perhaps she didn't look funny.

"I wonder what else is going to happen in this house? I think I will beat it for Milton—(Yes?)

"Well, boy of mine, I think you have had enough of these here tracks and I hope that when next I write that it will be more legible and more interesting. I do hope I receive a letter from you in this next mail, if you get a chance send some more 'parcel post.' Honey, boy, please come; come soon to your wi——.

"RENIE M."

In the same letter was enclosed a note from Mrs. Jones' daughter, Dorothy, which read:

"Dear Harry—I am just writing you a few lines to tell you I am thinking of you and wish you were down here. I miss you very much. We are not very well. Papa went back to work Tuesday. I have not been to school for two weeks. I have had a bad cold. We have lost the cat. She fell off the piazza Tuesday morning and we have not found her yet. Well, good-by. Will hear from you soon.

"Love from "DOROTHY."

MISSES HIM SO MUCH.

"Somerville, Mass., Feb. 11, 1919.

"Dear Boy—I just had to sit down and write to you again this morning, although I suppose you have not received my last letter yet. I am only hoping I may hear from you today—the mail comes in about an hour. I think I am feeling a little better today—have not so much fever. I have a lamb broth on cooking, and in a little while I will eat some.

"I put a washing in soak to do this morning, but I sure do not feel equal to doing it, so it will have to wait until tomorrow.

"There isn't anything hardly to write about, but still I feel as if I could be a little nearer if I wrote only a few lines. Don't I wish I could be still nearer—and so many times during both day and night I keep thinking I hear you coming up the stairs. Sometimes I have even gone to the head of the stairs, really expecting to see you. They creak all by themselves, I guess.

"Have you heard from Everett lately? Does she ever inquire if you have heard from Somerville? But you never do, do you? Well, honey (did I do it right?) dear, I will write a little more after I see whether I receive a letter from my boy. Miss your 'Bugs'? I don't like that name, and don't know why I wrote it, but I suppose I still think it.

"Tracksteews Syawin."

"P. S.: My Baby—Once more a line. Parcel post just arrived. And again I will say, 'All to the good.' Will we christen it?

"I also got your reply on the inside of the wrapper. Hardly visible, but I could read it and when. We are sure going to keep warm, aren't we? By—once more—with a whole bushel of XXXX.

"Your

"WI—— RENE."

NAME CONSERVATOR FOR TUTTLE ESTATE

New Haven, July 22.—Harry Post, nephew of the wife of former State Senator Dwight W. Tuttle, has been appointed conservator of the latter's estate, involving several thousands of dollars. Post yesterday filed suit for $75,000 against Mrs. Cora D. Ames, for twenty years confidential secretary to Tuttle, alleging she induced Tuttle to deed over to her large sums of money and property.

Post further alleges that Mrs. Ames knew that Tuttle was of unsound mind and incapable of conducting his own affairs. There are about six suits involved in the action.

At right, Mrs. Phillips, who is only 23, is shown in another pose, with her husband.

DISOWNED BABY TO GET MILLIONS

Famous Russell Divorce Case Decided in Wife's Favor

By ROBERT J. PREW.
Universal Service Correspondent.

London, July 22.—"The ten little fingers and ten little toes" in the famous Russell divorces case still are likely to clutch the huge Barony of Amphill fortune.

After five hours' deliberation tonight, a jury held Mrs. Russell not guilty of improper relations with two named co-respondents, but failed to agree regarding an unidentified co-respondent, whom Russell alleged was the father of his wife's nine-months-old son.

As was held in the Slingsby baby case, which was the talk of the two continents several years ago, that paternity could not be decided by similarity of features, so it was decided at the Russell trial which for two weeks has held the centre of interest among all classes of London and Paris.

In summing up, the president of the court tended to favor the wife who warned the jury not to consider the baby's birth due to a "miracle." This referred to testimony given by experts in the medical world, who said that although Mrs. Russell was a mother, she had never properly cohabited.

The judge paid a high tribute to the parents of Russell, Lord and Lady Ampthill, who, he said, came into court with the honest resolve to have baby's paternity decided.

As the result of the verdict, the baby will inherit the wealth of his father, when the latter dies, unless the case is retried later.

The jury, which included two women, was unable to agree on the "hunnish scenes" which Mrs. Russell described.

The defendant flatly denied intimacy with any of the men friends, although she admitted that she had gone to Paris with one of the co-respondents. She also denied that she had been familiar with him, declaring that she liked him because he was "divine dancer."

SEND PHOTOGRAPH WITH QUESTIONS

Expert Will Then Reveal Just What Is in Store for You

All through the ages people have been anxious to gaze into the future. Crystal gazers, palmists, mind readers and many others have been consulted, sometimes with surprisingly happy results.

But the method which has brought the most amazing and accurate predictions of the future is fortune telling by cards. Future gazing through cards was originated by gypsies more than 500 years ago.

Probably most people have had their fortunes told by the gypsies, being astounded at the revelation of things that have happened and things to happen—and all by little pieces of pasteboard called playing cards.

If you wish to hear about your future, fill out the accompanying coupon according to directions and send it to Dr. Andrew J. Trent, care of the Daily Advertiser, 300 Washington street. Dr. Trent will read the futures of anyone who sends in the required information. He will tell you if your wishes are coming true, if you are loved, if you will be successful in business. State whether man or woman, married or single, and if light or dark complexioned.

The Advertiser is offering money for the six best futures. There are two awards for $10 each and four others for $5 each. If your future is particularly bright, the Daily Advertiser will pay you for it. And send a picture of yourself, too. PLAN TO PREVENT DROWNING DEATHS

At a conference of representatives of the Red Cross, the Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations, called by the Massachusetts Safety Council at its headquarters, No. 6 Beacon street, to consider means of checking the increase in drowning accidents in New England, it was voted to appoint a permanent committee to study the problem and issue matter for the instruction of the public.

The Schaefer, or prone pressure method of resuscitation, which requires no apparatus, was recommended as the remedy to be first applied when a body is recovered from the water, and an effort at resuscitation should be made even when the body has been under water as long as thirty minutes. In several recent drowning accidents valuable time was lost after the body was recovered, in an attempt to obtain other means of resuscitation.

JUST REPLY TO 8 SHORT QUESTIONS

Remember the character books you used to have in school as kids? How a blankbook was filled with pictures and opposite each a string of questions asking your favorite this and that? And how it was passed about the class room surreptitiously and how proud you felt if someone asked you to write in it.

The Advertiser Mental Photos are on the same line, not so many questions, perhaps, but just as revealing. Answer the questions as printed in the Mental Photo of Miss Lena B. Chamberlain of No. 172 East River street, Orange, Mass. The result will be an accurate picture of your mind.

Have you joined the fun yet? No camera is needed, no X-ray, just a reply to the eight short questions. The result will be you. Answer the questions without too much forethought. Just jot down whatever pops into your head. If yours is an interesting Mental Photo, the Advertiser will pay you for it.

There are six awards every week for the six best offerings, one of $25 and five others of $5 each. And send a picture of yourself with your mental photo, but not a valuable one, as the Advertiser will not be responsible for lost photographs.

Send all to the Mental Photo Editor, Daily Advertiser, No. 300 Washington street. Then watch the paper. Every Monday morning the six prize winners will be announced. If you have sent yours in already, look in tomorrow's Advertiser to see how it stands with the winners. Because you have not seen yours printed during the previous week does not mean that it may not win a prize.

See the Daily Advertiser for awards tomorrow morning.

Both these amendments, Chairman Jones of the Committee said, would provoke discussion and consequently they were passed over until next week.

Goodrich announces new tire prices

—lowest cost mileage ever known

Effective July 20th, Goodrich established a revised price list that is a base line of tire value.

It gives the motorist the buying advantage of knowing that whatever size tire he selects is of the same quality—the Goodrich one-quality standard.

It gives him the longest mileage, the most satisfactory service and the highest quality his money can buy. Results will prove that it is impossible to buy tire mileage at lower cost.

Think of being able to buy

Silvertown Cords

at such prices as these:

SIZE	BASE LINE PRICE	SIZE	BASE LINE PRICE
30x3½ Cl.	$13.50	34x4 S.B.	$30.85

New Base Line prices are also effective on Goodrich Fabric Tires:

This revised price list affords the motorist as definite a guide to tire prices as Goodrich Tires are the definite standard of tire quality.

U. S. WOMAN MAGNET OF NEW RESORT

Daughter of Ex-Cabinet Minister Makes Pourville Popular

MRS. IDE FRENCH DIMS DEAUVILLE

Society Promises to Patronize the French Place She "Discovered"

By GERTRUDE LADY DECIES, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

London, July 22.—Normandy's newest Summer resort, which threatens to outdo Deauville, is Pourville, half way between London and Paris and a few miles from Dieppe.

Mrs. Ide Mercelle French, daughter of the late General R. J. Wynne, postmaster-general in the United States under President Roosevelt, is partly responsible for Pourville's popularity and this week-end is entertaining prominent society folk of London and Paris.

Included among her guests are Lady Dianna Cooper, Lord Holmesdale, Mrs. Arthur Capel, Colonel Freddie Crippe, Lord Daisiel, Earl Dudley, Lord and Lady Furnivalington, Lord and Lady Tichborne, Fanny Ward, Maurice Brett and Princess Radziwill.

Mrs. French wants to show society the loveliness of Pourville, which already has been promised enough patronage to insure a successful season, lasting until the end of September.

Mrs. French, who has been making her home in London, is going to New York in August on business. It is reported that she is interested in the proposed $30,000,000 hotel which Frank Andrews plans erecting in New York.

Elenora Duse, famous Italian actress, is coming to London in October for a short season, playing three performances a week. She is now sixty-four years old and was last seen in London in 1906, having been in retirement since then with the exception of one performance at Turin in 1921.

President Alvear of Argentina is the nation's guest. Princess Mary entertained him Friday at the Chesterfield House, many distinguished Britons and Americans meeting the statesman. When Senor Alvear arrived, he was met by the Prince of Wales, who took him to lunch with the King. Senor Alvear has arranged to lunch with Lloyd George next week.

Marchioness Curzon gave the long awaited party for Lady Alexandra Tuesday, it being one of the most brilliant private functions of the season. The Carleton House Terrace Mansion was specially decorated for the occasion, the royal guests including the Prince of Wales, Prince Arthur Connaught and Prince George. The American guests included Lady Ribbesdale and Lady Cunard.

Mrs. Louis Duveen, sister-in-law of Sir Joseph, famous art dealer, was married Wednesday to Captain John Crocker, well-known military figure in Paris.

Lord and Lady Mountbatten, whose marriage was one of the biggest events of the society season, are honeymooning at the Broadlands, Hampshire house of the bride's father, Colonel Ashley. They are going to Spain soon and then to America. The bride is most anxious to see New York and Washington, of which she has heard so much.

Mrs. H. H. Rogers, who returned to London recently, gave a dance for her daughter, Millicent, this week. Millicent looked charming in a creation of half-blue chiffon, while her mother wore a wonderful gown of silver cloth. Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone were among the prominent guests, while Tommy Lyman of New York, now entertaining in Paris, made a great hit with his popular songs. Millicent is proving one of the most popular girls of Mayfair.

Restrained by the Court From Visiting Women

Chicago, July 22.

JOHN HAAS was restrained by court order, made public today, from "visiting, posing, talking to, or riding with any woman except his wife."

Another injunction restrained Haas' mother-in-law from "visiting, talking with, or in any way interfering with the domestic happiness or connubial felicity" of Haas and his wife.

The restraining orders followed a reconciliation after Mrs. Haas had sued for divorce.

She claimed her husband would not "forget other women." He said his mother-in-law caused the trouble.

VETS' CONCLAVE SET FOR AUG. 19

Non-Partisans to Hear 100 Candidates Speak

The biggest political pow-wow in years in this State will be held on August 19 at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, under the auspices of the Ex-Service Men's Non-Partisan League.

More than 100 candidates for office at the coming Fall polls will be given a chance to speak and state their attitude on various bills of interest to war veterans. A dozen platforms will be provided so that there will be a continuous flow of political oratory.

Music will be furnished by the crack 101st Infantry band. A gala program of sports has been arranged and contestants will include stars athletes from all parts of the country.

Dancing and a vaudeville show will be other features. One of the crowning events will be the barbecue at which will be slain a "fatted calf," already provided for the festivities.

A huge amplifier will be used to broadcast the political speeches throughout the grove. A midway will prove an alluring attraction to thousands with its games, amusements and ubiquitous "side shows."

The league was formed three years ago and has become a powerful factor in politics of this State. It has fought many measures affecting the veterans and has succeeded in electing many of its candidates. President George E. Wilson is in charge of the program.

HUSBAND WAS SLAIN SAYS LYNN WOMAN

"My husband was murdered. He did not commit suicide I am certain because there was no reason under the sun why he should have wanted to take his own life. I am positive he was the victim of foul play."

This statement was made yesterday by Mrs. Lillian Palmer, wife of George M. Palmer, Lynn chemist, whose body was found in Floating Bridge pond. Police are investigating.

Mr. Palmer was in the best of spirits Friday night, according to his wife, who left him early in the evening. When she returned at midnight he was gone and it was not long afterward that his body was found.

ASK NEW TRIAL FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

The third supplementary motion for a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, charged with murdering a South Braintree paymaster on April 15, 1920, was filed yesterday.

The basis of the new motion is an attack on the character of Carlos E. Goodrich, one of the principal identifying witnesses, whom the defence charges with being a perjurer, bigamist, ex-convict, horse thief and fugitive from justice, averring also his real name is Ernestue C. Whitney.

BOY LEADS BANDITS IN $1775 THEFT

Gunmen in Daring Holdup Take Payroll in Somerville Factory

SURPRISE WORKERS IN HILLSON FACTORY

Escape in Old Automobile, Number of Which Had Been Concealed

Three daring bandits, armed with loaded revolvers, entered the tinware manufacturing plant of the H. M. Hillson Company, No. 18 Taylor street, Somerville, shortly before noon yesterday, thrust their guns into the faces of four men and three women engaged in finishing up the weekly payroll and escaped with a tin box containing $1,775 in envelopes.

The men entered so softly that none of the employes were aware of what was going on until they heard the command of one of the men to throw up their hands.

Three of the people in the office at the time were members of the firm. They are H. M. Hillson, G. Irving Hillson and Joseph Hillson, all of No. 390 Park street, Dorchester. The fourth man was Joseph Brooks, of the same address.

The women employes are Mrs. Emma L. Dutch of No. 84 Thetford avenue, Dorchester; Miss Betty Kalinsky of 49 Munroe street, Roxbury, and Miss Esther J. Johansson of No. 43 Glenwood road, Somerville.

According to the story told the police, Joseph Hillson was in the rear of the office making up the payroll when the first bandit, a boy about 18 years old and weighing about 100 pounds, confronted J. Irving Hillson, who stood between the table and the payroll box, and pointing a revolver at his head said:

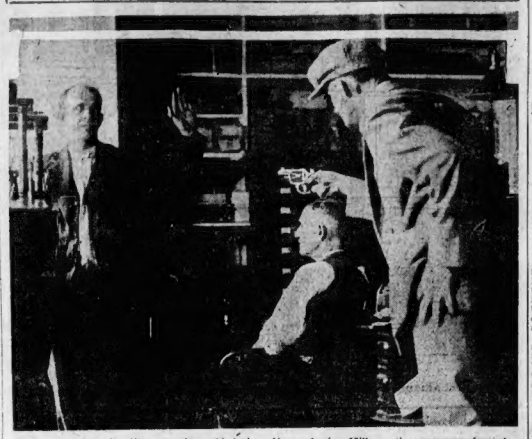
"Hands up or I'll plug you."

Forcing Hillson back toward the money box, the bandit reached over and grabbed it.

The second rubber spoke to his companion and asked, "Have you got it all?" Both robbers then backed toward the door, where the third bandit was waiting. The trio then ran up Taylor street to Sidney street, where they jumped into an old Ford touring car, with the top up and the rear curtain torn. The men then drove at breakneck speed in the direction of Winter Hill.

Victor Lutt, an employe of the Hillson Company, who gave chase, picked up one of the envelopes containing $1f.

STAGING A SOMERVILLE HOLDUP



Here's how three bandits yesterday raided the office of the Hillson tinware manufacturing plant on Taylor street, Somerville, and got away with $1,775, intended for employes. The demonstration shows it is simple enough when you get the "drop" on an unsuspecting office force. And the bandits escaped in a rickety old auto.

LEAVES $30,000 IN PUBLIC BEQUESTS

Approximately $30,000 is disposed of in public bequests and to relatives and friends, in addition to a provision for a trust fund of $20,000, by the will of Mrs. Rebecca H. Eddy of No. 3 Centervale Park, Dorchester.

The trust fund is for the benefit of Helen Brooks Hathaway, upon whose death the money is to be divided equally between the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital, for free beds; the Fragment Society of Plymouth, the Home for Incurables and the Jordan Hospital. The Fragment Society of Plymouth, the Ryder Home of Plymouth, the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital and the First Universalist Church of Plymouth will benefit equally by the sale of Mrs. Eddy's estate.

The residue of Mrs. Eddy's estate is given the Mt. Pleasant home in Roxbury, the Dorchester House and the Dorchester Relief Society.

CHILD DIES OF POISON BERRIES

The other two girls were made violently ill by the berries but are expected to recover.

IGNORED CROSSING WARNING; IS KILLED

He stepped in front of the Rockport Flyer to his death. He was about thirty years old.

Mrs. Helen M. Dunham of No. 762 Main street, Greenwood, died from heart failure yesterday at her home. She was stricken just before her sister, Mrs. Mary K. Hall of Wakefield, called to see her.

COX AWAY IN STRIKE MIXUP

Governor at Profile, Secretary Says No Troops or Police Ordered Out

Governor Cox, after having issued the orders necessary to mobilize the State Constabulary and State police to put down "disorders" resulting from the railroad strike went to Profile, N. H., for a short vacation in the "Switzerland of America," while this much-muddled situation had developed at the State House in his absence:

1. Colonel Alfred F. Foote, the State Commissioner of Public Safety, who said last night that troops were being rushed to the railroad centers for duty, refused today to discuss the situation and referred all interviewers to the Governor's office.

2. The Governor's secretary, Captain Herman A. MacDonald, said that no troops or State police had been ordered out.

3. Lieutenant-Governor Fuller, supposed to hold the reins of the State in the absence of the Governor, had not been informed that the Governor is away.

4. Governor Cox said at noon Friday and again at 4 o'clock that no "disorders" had been reported, and at 5 o'clock gave orders to permit the marshalling of troops to quiet the "disorders."

5. His office said yesterday that the only "disorders" reported were three or four days ago and at least one of the reports was determined to have been a fake.

CHILDREN TO SING OLD SONGS IN G. A. R.

Des Moines, Ia., July 22.—Twenty-five thousand little grandchildren, massed in the formation of a mammoth American flag, will sing the songs of sixty years ago for 25,000 old grandfathers at the national encampment of the G. A. R. in Des Moines September 24 to 28.

Every pupil in the Des Moines schools will be used in constructing the big human flag on the second afternoon of the Grand Army encampment.

EXPLOSION INJURES CIRCUS EMPLOYES

New London, July 22.—Two circus employes were badly scalded when a steam boiler connected with a steam calliope of the California Exposition Shows, exploded at Woodland Park. The men are Joseph E. Shiner of No. 55 Baldwin street, Charlestown, Mass., and Fred Williams. They were taken to the Lawrence Hospital, where the doctors say they will recover.

1000 GATHER TO SEE FIGHT OVER A NICKEL

More than 1,000 persons, excited by rumors of shooting fest night, gathered in front of the fruit store of Hassse Ahigian, No. 76 Clarendon street, as he scuffled with a customer. The trouble was over a nickel which Haesse claimed from the stranger as payment for matches. Ahigian suffered a severe cut on his wrist, received a visit from the riot squad and was greeted by 1,000 excited pedestrians.

Canary Island Still Whistles; Scorns Radio

By Universal Service.

Washington, July 23.

THE Canary Islands are an exception to the world-wide demand for American radio instruments.

The natives are satisfied with their centuries-old system of whistling signals.

Consul F. A. Henry at Teneriffe reports that by this system the natives convey news and information over considerable distances with great rapidity.

A recent attempt to introduce radio on the remote island of Gomera in the Canary group was greeted with scorn.

FIND PORTRAIT LOST 12 YEARS

British Princess Regains Painting of Mother by Famous Artist

By ROBERT J. PREW.

Universal Service Correspondent.

London, July 21.—After laying for twelve years in a storeroom of the Claridge Hotel, a beautiful portrait by Carolyn Duran has been discovered and claimed by Princess Belosersky, daughter of General C. A. Whittier.

It is a three-quarter length oil painting, 59 inches by 36, having for its subject the General's wife. The portrait was done in Paris by Duran in 1887.

General Whittier took the portrait to America, where it remained twenty years. Following the death of his wife the General went to England to live with his daughter.

He shipped the canvas to the Claridge in advance. General Whittier died during the voyage.

RUM BOATS SWARM N. E. COAST LINE

Revenue Patrol Is Kept Pursuing Smugglers From Provinces

Watch for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia rum running boats.

That is the order that has been flashed from Washington to coast guard crews, revenue cutter skippers and customs inspectors on the coasts of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine.

That a big bulk of liquor is pouring into small ports along the New England coast and that the liquor is transported from the Maritime provinces in schooners and big motor boats flying the Dominion flag is the charge made by Federal prohibition agents in Washington.

The charge is based on reports submitted by the customs collectors in Boston, Portsmouth and Portland. These men have made a survey of the booze smuggling business and assert that a big share of it is conducted by natives of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

DISGUISED AS FISHERMEN.

Disguised as fishermen, rum filled boats run to isolated places along the northern New England coast, where they are met by smaller launches. Getting the contraband into the many ports along the Maine, New Hampshire and Bay State coasts is then an easy proposition owing to the fact that the coast is poorly guarded.

To stop this business or to diminish it the Federal authorities assert that a great deal of enforcement work can be done by coast guard and revenue cutter crews.

They have been told to watch for suspicious looking craft that hover on the coast and to search the small launches that visit such boats.

"It is impossible to estimate the amount of booze that is run into the country from the Maritime provinces," says W. W. Loftin, collector of the port of Boston. "It is certain that the amount would surprise the country if we could get definite figures. At present the promoters of the rum running boats are making big fortunes, but it is hoped that through the vigilance of Federal employes on the coast that the business can be cut considerably."

OPERATE MOTOR BOATS.

For the last six months a huge quantity of Canadian booze has been smuggled into Portsmouth, N. H., and Newburyport. Large motor boats owned and operated by the booze rings have met New Brunswick and Nova Scotia rum schooners a few miles off the coast and have brought the contraband ashore without much trouble.

There have been a few seizures but the number has been too small to discourage the Canadian smugglers.

DEMOCRATS FOR WOMAN CANDIDATE

Call for Volunteers to Run on Ticket for State Auditor

Wanted—A genuine dye-in-the-wool feminine Democrat to run for State auditor at the fall election. Applicants must possess business ability, a striking personality, a capacity for work, imagination and the quality of leadership.

The Democratic State Committee awaits a response. The auditor's place on the State ticket is going to be given to a woman.

The auditorship is no small plum. It pays $4,500 a year and gives one a place of prominence in the Governor's family.

It is not necessary to be a club woman, a society woman, the mother of six pudgy kiddies, a rich woman or a great orator.

A Democrat with ability has a right to get into the swim. To do so, Mrs. Candidate, just walk into the headquarters of the committee at No. 75 State street and announce your willingness to serve the State.

The bigwigs of the party will look you over and subject you to the acid test and tell you whether you measure up.

When the committee asks how old you are, make it snappy. Don't hesitate. Frankness is a cardinal virtue in politics.

Massachusetts has scores of women who could fill the auditorship. Several have been mentioned as possibilities, but another month will pass before the commitee selects a candidate.

Among those mentioned are Mrs. Alice B. Cram, Mrs. Josiah Quincy, Mrs. John F. J. Herbert of Worcester, Miss Hannah Ashley of New Bedford, Miss Nora Driscoll of Cambridge and Mrs. Thomas Rowland of Nahant. But the question is, Who will accept?

Other cities and towns must be heard from. It is certain that every one of them possesses at least one woman who measures up to the job.

Mrs. Cram accepted the nomination two years ago and made a good showing at the State election. She is a Boston woman and for years has been active in business and politics.

Crown Prince Barred From German Home

By Universal Service.

Berlin, July 22.

THE former Crown Prince will not be permitted to return to Germany for the present, and his prospects for returning in the future are poor.

The former heir to the throne made a formal request to the government for permission to take up residence with his wife on their estate in Silesia. The government was considering the matter when Dr. Rathenau, Foreign Minister, was slain. After that event the request was filed without answer.

Owing to the pernicious activities attributed to the Monarchists the government, it is believed, will not even deign to make reply to the former Crown Prince.

POLICEMAN SHOT IN FIGHT

Receivese Four Bullets While Trying to Arrest Thieves

New York, July 22.—A pistol battle between a policeman and four men he caught trying to enter a Brooklyn warehouse today continued for ten minutes. The quartet escaped, leaving bloodstains along the route. The policeman, Arthur Lowse, with two bullets in his abdomen and two in his arm, collapsed while pursuing them.

Mrs. Marie Kennedy, living in a flat overlooking the yard behind the warehouse, noticed the men, took her six-months-old baby in her arms and ran to the street to tell the policeman.

Her brother and another man slipped into the yard with Lowse, who gave his night stick to one of them, and then ordered the suspected thieves to hold up their hands. One began firing. The man with the nightstick used it, but ineffectively.

SALES TAX OR TARIFF VETO

President Makes Bonus Position Clear to White House Callers

By Universal Service.

Washington, July 22.—Word again reached senators today that unless a sales tax is provided to meet the cost of the soldier bonus, President Harding will veto the measure.

The President has made this statement to three prominent callers at the White House within the past two weeks. Neither of these visitors was a senator, but all of them reported to friends at the Capitol what the President had said.

MUST PROVIDE REVENUE.

Mr. Harding was declared to have expressed surprise that anyone should have doubted his position. In its present shape, he was quoted as saying he could not do otherwise than veto the bill.

The President's position is that the financial condition of the treasury cannot stand the cost of the bonus at this time, unless some means of raising the revenue is provided. He believes a sales tax is the proper method of overcoming the financial difficulty.

When word of the President's statement reached them, leaders of the opposition to the bonus made a canvass to see how many Senators would vote to sustain the veto. Thirty Senators were listed, it was declared.

SENATORS COUNT NOSES.

This number is only three short of enough to prevent passage of the bill over the veto if all members of the Senate should be present. Those favoring the veto assert they can get the additional three, but that with the usual number of absentees, 30 will be adequate.

Representatives of the several soldier organizations called on Senate leaders today, urging that the bonus bill be called up and disposed of.

2 BOYS DYING; HIT BY RUNAWAY AUTO

Raymond Pelletier, twelve, of No. 48 North Franklin street, and George Belleveau, thirteen, of No. 60 North Franklin street, both of Lynn, are dying. Last night they were pinned against a tree by an automobile when the driver lost control.

Edward M. McDonough, of No. 101 Sheridan avenue, Medford, driving up Lover's Leap avenue, attempted to shift gears. The incline was steep and when he applied the brakes, they failed. The machine crashed down the hill, running on the sidewalk and pinning the two boys to a fence.

BAR MOTOR LOVE; HELPS RUM RUNNER

Marblehead Stops Auto-Spooning to Stop Smuggling

BUT COMPROMISES WITH YOUNG WOMEN

Can Use Their Cars as Bath Houses and Wear One-Piece Suits

By BEN BOYDEN.

Marblehead—in early days the home of smugglers—is determined to rid its coast line of rum runners, and to accomplish the purpose they have to put a ban on auto spooning. At first, the connection seemed obscure, but the connection is nevertheless there.

Remember that auto-spooning is an exhilarating outdoor sport and became a fixed institution shortly after the birth of the honk car. Volumes could be written of the sport and many volumes concerning the persons who are confirmed addicts, but Marblehead says that the Constitution of the U. S. A. comes first and as auto-spooning interferes with the functioning of the country's fundamental law code it must end.

HIDE BEHIND SPOONERS.

You see the daring rum runners in their fast motor boats work with operators of a fast motor car.

And this co-operative effort has been made easy because of the numerical strength of auto spooners. In a word there have been so many darkened cars on the shore roads of Marblehead in the late hours of night that the police have had difficulty detecting rum cars that receive the contraband from motor boats.

So, to check the rum runners, Chief of Police Trasher has adopted drastic measures. He says that closed cars and machines with curtains drawn will be watched carefully and, in fact, searched. He intends to make this rule so effective that late hour auto-spooners will be driven from the limits of his native town.

But, being a sensible police chief and trying to be a reasonably good fellow, he is willing to compromise a wee bit and compensate the young women principals of auto-spooning parties.

This is what he gives them permission to do:

They can wear one-piece bathing suits if they wish, and, in fact, anything in the form of bathing garb.

They can draw the curtains of their autos for twenty minutes for the purpose of undressing, and can rest assured that patrolmen and life guards will not peek while a change from street costumes to salt water clothes is in progress.

They can park their cars along the wind swept Causeway until a respectable hour at night and enjoy absolute freedom from prohibition agents and raiding policemen.

But under no circumstances will a young woman and her escort be permitted to drive to a point on the short and indulge in a darkened car spooning fete in the late hours of night or wee small hours of the morning.

That sort of conduct will not be tolerated, and just because spooning and rum running are allied sports.

From the Revolution to Mr. Volstead is a long span of years, but when Volstead had his own sweet way and banished booze the Marbleheaders joined the white ribbon brigade.

Then came real trouble. Booze smugglers selected Marblehead as an ideal port of entry and for more than a year the motorized rum boats and hootch carrying autos have kept the police and customs house officer on the alert.

"A patrolman," says Chief Trasher, "hears the chug of a motor boat. A few minutes later he spies a big touring car with the curtains drawn. The big car rolls along and stops at an isolated spot. What is the driver doing? What is his purpose in paying Marblehead a visit at 2 a. m.? There is just one thing to do and that is to stop such cars and overhaul them. Rum running must end so far as Marblehead is concerned and it's going to end."

That is the story as told by Trasher and explains why autoists are not permitted to draw their car curtains and spend an hour or so near the sad sea waves. To do so will arouse the suspicions of the police and possibly cause embarrassment for the occupants.

CARS FOR BATH HOUSES.

In the early hours of the evening motorists journey to the Causeway and enjoy a dip in the cool waters. Owing to the lack of bath house facilities the autoists draw the curtains of their cars and undress.

Trasher appreciates that it would be perfectly horrible for one of his blue coats to peek at a fair young woman who is about to step into a bathing suit so the search-and-seizure rule does not become effective until 11 o'clock. The only exception to that rule is on rainy or foggy nights. On such nights the rule goes in force at sundown because the police hold that genuine lovers of ocean ozone are not seeking such comfort on stormy evenings.

As for bathing suits, the Marblehead police rely in the feminine conscience and feel certain that it will cause the ladies to exercise discretion.

Putnam's Horse Back in Stall—Still Hungry

"THIS is a tough world for man or beast," says Raymond Putnam of Wakefield.

Putnam only recently served a "sentence" to sleep two nights in a stall with his horse "Bella," because he did not feed her properly. Everything began to look rosy for Raymond and "Bella," for he found a fine pasture land, where he placed the horse to roam and feed to her heart's content.

"Bella" was getting along finely until the owner of the pasture land came to the conclusion that his cow was being deprived of sufficient grass, so he told Putnam to take his horse, hungry or not, off his pasture, and to keep it off.

Poor "Bella" is now back at the old stall, and unless kindly disposed people come along to feed her, will be there with the same empty stomach that got her master into trouble.

Putnam has no money, it is claimed, and he is also out of work.

SEVEN SLAIN BY YOUNG ESKIMO

Hudson Bay Factor and Mounted Policeman Among Victims

Edmonton, Alberta, July 23.—Out of the frozen North a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police has just arrived with news of the murder of seven men by an Eskimo who ran amuck on Herschell Island, Hudson Bay, four months ago.

His victims were Constable Boak of the mounted forces, G. Binder, Hudson Bay factor, and five of his own tribesmen.

The Eskimo, a young seal hunter employed by Binder, killed his five comrades as they lay sleeping. The mounted police captured him and took him back to Herschell Island, where he was jailed.

Constable Boak was detailed to guard him. The prisoner seized the officer's rifle and killed him as he slept. When Binder threatened to cut off escape, the Eskimo killed him, too.

Making his way back to the tribe, the murderer told his fellows he had killed seven men, and declared he intended to "wipe out the rest of the Island." Twenty-four hours later the mounted police recaptured him.

DRY AGENTS SEAL HAND BREWERY

Providence, July 22.—Prohibition agents of the "Flying Squadron" sealed the doors, offices and vaults of the Hand Brewery Company of Pawtucket after investigating conditions here yesterday and today. Agents say that beer was being brewed which contained 3% per cent. alcohol.

The flying trip to Providence was the result of the seizure of a truck loaded with thirty barrels of beer with the name of Hands Brewery Company about ten miles outside of Worcester last Wednesday. The agents had received word that the load was going from Providence to Springfield and hid on the State road beyond Worcester, stopping the truck when it came along.

CIGARETTES UPSET WOMAN, SAYS JUDGE

Norwich, July 24. — Excessive cigarette smoking does not impair a woman's mentality, it merely upsets her temperament, Judge James H. Webb ruled in Superior Court, where Mrs. Adelene Palmer Lee sued her husband, Dr. Harry M. Lee, of New Haven, for divorce. Mrs. Lee charged cruelty, but the judge dismissed the suit. It was alleged at the trial that Mrs. Lee smoked to excess.

OLYMPIC SETS UP NEW RECORD

3500 AT JORDAN MARSH OUTING

Harbor Sail, Sports and Dinner at Pemberton Make All Happy

There were 3,500 employes with their families who enjoyed the second old fashioned picnic of the Good Fellowship Clubs of the Jordan Marsh Co., yesterday, at Pemberton. Everybody was there from Jimmie Shea, the newest office boy, to the "Boss" and board of directors.

And everybody voted it the best time ever, from the boat sail around the harbor to the "good night" at Rowe's Wharf.

There were all kinds of land and water sports, a fun-packed midway, and all-day dancing.

Two boats were chartered for the outing and a special two-hour sail around the harbor, with greeting whistles from every boat within hearing put the picnickers in a happy mood for the elaborate menu prepared by George Swasey's committee on dinner arrangements.

Track sports produced several aspirants for Charlie Paddock's crown, while a special troupe of Jordan Marsh bathing girls gave exhibitions of swimming and diving that would make Annette Kellerman blush.

The Main store defeated the Bluman corner store in a six inning baseball game, 3 to 1, but the boys from the corner laid their defeat to Gus Papke's lack of glasses and his aversion to running around the sacks to get the close ones. Gus, however, was glad to get away with his life and said that his decisions were bad because he was trying always to make up for a previous boner.

WILL HONOR TWO TRANS-SEA FLIERS

Portuguese societies of Greater Boston today celebrate the successful flight of Sacadura Cabral and Gago Coutinho of Portugal, from Lisbon to Rio de Janeiro. Several of the societies will assemble at East Cambridge Park at 8 a. m. and march to Adams square, where they will be joined by societies from East Boston.

The combined procession will then proceed to Holy Cross Cathedral, where a religious service will be held. From the Cathedral the procession will go to the Common for a mass meeting at Parkman bandstand. Eduardo de Carvalho, Portuguese consul in Boston, will give a banquet at 6 p. m. to members of the Portuguese colonies in service in New England and the committee in charge of the celebration. Tonight a musical program will be given at St. Mary's Hall, Cambridge.

TWO CITIES SUED FOR BLOCKING RIVER

Alleged blocking and diverting of Island End River as a natural drainage waterway has resulted in joint suits against the cities of Chelsea and Everett by property owners and business firms in the affected area. A hearing will be held next Friday for appointment of a master.

The remonstrants claim that patients in the Naval Hospital suffer from the nuisance; that it has converted the district into a gigantic "mosquito hole"; that stores and homes are invaded by huge rats, cellars flooded and gardens ruined.

COAST GUNNERS PRAISED BY EDWARDS

The First Coast Defense Command, made up of twelve coast artillery companies, M. N. G., commanded by Colonel B. B. Shedd, yesterday completed one of its most successful tours of duty when it wound up two weeks of artillery and ten-inch rifle practice at Forts Warren, Andrews and Strong in Boston Harbor. Major-General Edwards, commander of the First Corps Area, visited the command and was warm in his praise of the marksmanship of the gunners.

EZRA C. BROCKWAY DIES IN MARKET

Ezra C. Brockway, 137 Billings street, Atlantic, vice-president of the Atlantic Acceptance Corporation, yesterday was stricken with an attack of indigestion while in a Blackstone street market, and died within a few minutes.

Born in Fairhaven, Vt., sixty-five years ago, Brockway was educated in New Hampshire and passed half of his life in that State. Later in life he moved to Boston, and three years ago moved to Atlantic. He is survived by his wife.

DRIVEN FROM HOMES BY AMMONIA FUMES

New York, July 22.—Hundreds living in West 46th and 47th streets were routed from their homes today by ammonia fumes that permeated the neighborhood for an hour when a cylinder head blew off at an ice cream factory in 11th avenue.
